The Cars Roll Westward
Babies With Measles
Private Cars Cheaper
Where You Go, Radio Goes

Fort Wayne, Ind., Dec. 9—Beautiful sunshine in this almost-western country. Mr. Paul Block of New York is speeding westward in his private car, "Friendship," attached to a lot of plebeian, proletarian steel cars that anybody can use. Himself more democratic than Andrew Jackson, Block has a private car because he must, on account of the big advertising staff that accompanies him.

There is no "maiden meditation, fancy-free" element in a modern trip through America. The radio follows the train; Heaven help the traveler. As the sun rises, it tells him how he may get rid of that stomach, how his wife may get rid of those curves in fifteen minutes a day. Then into the private cars comes the voice of the President of the United States, telling farmers about everything.

The President, in a cheerful mood, refers to those hostile to his administration, says:

"It all depends on whose baby has the measles."

Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, editor of the Washington Herald, remarks:

"If all American business men who think their babies have the measles should call at the White House on the same day, it will be a great day for measles."

Then comes a voice on the radio, concluding every verse with, "That is a Sign That I Love You."

Advertising a product labelled "Oshkosh by Gosh."

"Signing off," your entertainer says, "Listen next week," promises to sing a song which starts:

"Sing me a song of the prairie,
Sing me a song of the plain,
Sing me a song of the mountain,
Sing me the old song again."

That ditty, called a cowboy song, has a powerful effect on the soul when sung in a minor key entirely through the nose, to banjo accompaniment. It would make a real cowboy want to shoot somebody.

You learn from "Oshkosh by Gosh" that cattle and lambs are slow, but a drop of 24,000 in the supply of hogs "should have a favorable effect," which means that your pork chops and sausages may be dearer.

Sitting in your proletarian Pullman stateroom in a plebeian public car between two private cars you wonder how it seems and what it costs to have your own car, a sort of land-yacht, named "Ranger," (that is Mrs. Patterson's car) or "Friendship" (that is Mr. Block's car).

During the depression the private car business diminished sadly. It fell off so much that whereas a private car owner formerly had to pay for twenty-five tickets, even though he traveled all alone, the number of tickets was dropped to twenty, and then to fifteen. You could buy private cars at a bargain now, and you would need to buy only fifteen tickets for your exclusive grandeur.

A trip that would cost the proletarian $100 would cost you with fifteen tickets $1500, cheap enough if you like exclusiveness, or if the size of your advertising staff makes an entire car necessary.

If you would like to feel exclusive for a little while, the Pullman Company will rent you a private car all to yourself for $75 a day. You buy the fifteen tickets and the food.

Recently the private car has been picking up and it may be possible and desirable to make the owner buy more tickets. But we have only one man in America now with a net income above five millions a year, and private car recovery may be slow.

Once before 1929, when plutocracy was rampant and unashamed, and the proletarian cowered under its heel with nothing but steady work for everybody, $8 to $18 a day for solace in the building trades, American private cars were twice as thick as Milton's "Autumnal leaves that strow the brooks in Vallombrosa."

When Gene Tunney fought Dempsey in Philadelphia, putting himself in the private car class and Dempsey in the "former champion" class, Mr. Levins handled 82 private cars arriving in Philadelphia in one day, plus eight private special trains of ten cars or more and 12 public special trains.

The American was a "good fellow when he had it," and took his private car to help sustain the prizefight industry.

Apart from all that, the regular news pours in, to enlighten

Japan's Stand Perils Navy Parley

It's True, Fans! Boston Gets 'Em Both!

U. S. DEMANDS 5-5-3 RATIO OF SHIPS

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service Correspondent

London, Dec. 10—Japan's demand for equality and a common upper limit placed the five-power naval conference on the verge of crisis today as the delegates settled down to their first business session.

With the parley heading toward a rocky path while still in its swaddling clothes, Norman H. Davis, leader of the American contingent, supported the present 5-5-3 ratio, which Japan opposes, and declared this system had been successful for 13 years in maintaining peace and security.

SPEED JAPAN'S DEMAND

French Ambassador Charles Corbin suggested limitation of total tonnage. If this proposal is supported by the Japanese, it will face stiff opposition from the United States and Britain.

Admiral Osami Nagano is expected to answer questions clarifying the Japanese position at the next meeting tomorrow afternoon. Other delegates consider the Japanese demand for a common upper limit of tonnage to be still somewhat vaguely presented.

He will be asked whether his plan is intended to embrace all navies, including Russia's.

Britain today brought Japan's demand for "global" parity into the open with a motion to consider naval limitation on a basis of total tonnage before restrictions by ship classifications are discussed.

Admiral Osami Nagano's state-

DEATH TIP TO PRESS

Then Olvany, Jr., Shoots Self

By BRUCE CLARE
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Dec. 10—George W. Olvany, Jr., son of the former head of Tammany Hall, was fighting for his life in General Hospital early today after an attempt to commit suicide because of ill health.

He has two wounds, inflicted by bullets from a .45-calibre automatic, one in his forehead and the other in his nose.

He was given a blood transfusion, the blood being furnished by Mrs. Bernice Egan, wife of Michael Egan, former world champion handball player.

This reporter found Olvany gasping for life in a field near the Ampersand boat house, about one mile from Saranac Lake, shortly after 2 a. m. today after one of the strangest and most dramatic experiences ever to befall any newspaperman.

Olvany and I attended a party here last night.

During the course of the party, Olvany called me aside and said:

Boy Burned By Mother For Lie

A five-year-old boy of Malden who broke the commandment "Thou shalt not tell a lie" was punished so severely by his mother that he may lose his hand.

Today, the youngster, who with younger brother attends a private school in Malden, complained to the school's principal that "his hand hurt something awful."

The teacher, upon looking at the hand, noticed a deep burn extending along the back of the hand to the wrist.

The child told the teacher his mother had burned him with a red-hot poker because he told her a lie.

Malden police were called and went to see the mother.

There the boy's story was corroborated, they said, and the officers made their report to Captain John J. Alyward.

The doctor who treated the little boy said the burn had been made last Sunday and had had no treatment.

He called it a second-degree burn, which, with the infection that has set in and the shock of the pain, might even prove fatal.

Rain, Snow, Cold Heading Here

Don't let today's abnormally warm weather fool you, because real winter is just around the corner, the weather man reminded today. He predicts rain and snow for tonight, followed by much colder weather tomorrow.

The mercury will drop to 20 tomorrow night, he says.

BULLETIN

Chicago, Dec. 10 (AP)—The National League today voted to award the franchise and players of the financial crippled Boston Braves to Robert Quinn, for three years business manager of the Brooklyn club. Quinn will become president and general manager.

Official Dispatch to the Boston Evening American

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 10—Jimmy Foxx, slugging first-sacker, and Johnny Marcum, hill-billy pitching ace of the Philadelphia Athletics, became Red Sox today.

In return for the pair, the A's received Gordon "Dusty" Rhodes, veteran right-handed pitcher, and George Savino, a young catcher who had been out under option in Syracuse, and, of course, a large slice of Tom Yawkey's fortune, estimated between $250,000 and $300,000.

It is learned on reliable authority that the players named today aren't all who are included in the Sox-A's transaction.

Within a few weeks, it is reported, announcement will be made that the Red Sox have purchased Roger Cramer, A's star outfielder.

Foxx, who topped the home run field last season with 36 circuit drives and finished third among the American League batters, had a three-year contract with the A's which has two years to run.

His salary is $12,500, but there

New York, Dec. 10 (AP)—Mining issues reacted sharply in today's stock market following further price confusion in world silver centers.

While the list, generally, was unsettled by the sagging metals, a number of specialties moved against the trend. Losses of one to around nine dollars were recorded by the mines. The close was heavy.

Market reports on Pages 18, 19

To the Boston Red Sox for the 1936 baseball season come Jimmy Foxx, slugging first sacker of the Philadelphia Athletics, and Johnny Marcum, hill-billy pitcher of the same team, both acquired in a swap and cash bonus dicker announced today at Chicago. To the "A's" in return go Gordon "Dusty" Rhodes, veteran right hand pitcher, and George Savino, young catcher. Cash payment by Boston to the "A's" is estimated at a sum between $250,000 and $300,000.

NAVY PROBERS EYING PAIR AS CRUISER VANDALS

Two Fore River shipyard workers, reported Communists, are under suspicion in connection with the new sabotage plot aboard the navy cruiser Quincy, the Boston Evening American learned today.

Both had access to the ship. One is a skilled worker.

Not only has the loose nut which ruined the Quincy's $100,000 turbine reduction gears been recovered, the American learned, but it has been positively identified as a mongrel type, not even in use anywhere in the yard, let alone in the cruiser construction.

It is 1¼ inches, of peculiar shape, case-hardened steel, and even its threads are irregular.

PURUOSE TRACED

Government see investigators are positive it was taken into the yard and aboard the warship for one purpose—that which was accomplished when the test vibration caused it to drop into the expensive meshing gears.

Developments which included no denial of sabotage came fast yesterday after the Boston Evening American exclusively revealed the damage done Saturday.

Navy intelligence men joined in the investigation, and it was learned from reliable quarters that the probers leaned strongly to the theory of a plot hatched by a radical group even before suspects were named.

THIRD DAMAGE

Meanwhile, fearing that further attempts will be made to cripple the ship, additional guards were ordered at the shipyard. During the early morning hours, six guards watched over the cruiser in place of the usual two.

What prompted investigators to believe that the damage was the work of radicals was the fact that the latest sabotage, which occurred Saturday, is the third since construction of the ship was started.

Last August a mysterious fire in the electric contro' room caused heavy damage, and six weeks later fire was discovered at the head of the slip at which the cruiser is berthed.

On this latter occasion, however, quick action by workers at the Fore River yards prevented serious damage to the yard and the vessel.

LEAGUE TO POSTPONE OIL EMBARGO AGAINST ITALY

TUFTS PROFESSOR VOWS HE WILL NEVER SIGN OATH

Professor Earle M. Winslow of the Tufts College faculty declared today that he never will sign the teachers' oath.

Professor Winslow, one of two who submitted their resignations to Tufts officials in the oath fight, also said that the president and trustees at Tufts are working out a new form of oath.

"That form," said Professor Winslow, "I will take. I am hoping that the law, as it stands, will be repealed.

"I don't believe in forcing a person to take an oath of allegiance, because the forcing of a person to do so is a step toward Communism and Fascism. I certainly shall not take the oath in its present form."

Taking an opposite stand, Professor Alfred C. Lane, who joined Professor Winslow in submitting resignations rather than sign the oath, resisted today and said he would sign if requested by the college authorities.

"I recognize the right of a college to ask for a pledge of loyalty," he declared. "For the state to order a pledge in the present instance is a different matter."

But whether Tufts or any other institution where some of the faculty have balked at signing the bill will make the requests was a matter of conjecture. Many other objectors have indicated that they will sign if requested by their own authorities.

Meeting to take action on the resignations of Professors Lane and Winslow, the board of trustees of Tufts voted to refer the matter to the executive committee, but also voted that any educators who fail to sign the oath will cease to teach after December 31.

Announcement of this action was made by President John Albert Cousens after a special meeting of the board.

Dr. Payson Smith, commissioner of education, avoided a bit of embarrassment as a result of the Tufts action. He is a member of the executive committee of the college, and rather than be put in a position of ruling on the resignations, he announced that he will not serve as an active committeeman considering these cases.

BRITAIN BALKS AT THE TERMS OFFERED DUCE FOR PEACE

Geneva, Dec. 10 (AP)—Progress of efforts by France and Great Britain to end the Italo-Ethiopian war may block further League penalties against Italy.

A League of Nations' official said today there was a possibility the committee of 18, scheduled to meet Thursday, might not convene until some future date.

The committee's agenda calls for the discussion of an oil embargo against Italy. The official indicated the Anglo-French negotiations had reached such a stage that new sanctions might embarrass the cause of peace.

Dr. Augusto Vasconcellos of Portugal, chairman of the committee, however, told the Associated Press he had received no request thus far for a change in the date of the session.

DUCE IGNORES PEACE PLAN

From Rome came word that Premier Mussolini persisted in his efforts to take by warfare what other powers were debating whether to concede him by peace negotiations —a strip of Ethiopia.

Informed Italian sources said General Graziani had been encouraged by promotion from the rank of corps commander to "army commander."

Authoritative sources said Il Duce was silently checking the advances of his northern and southern armies against the approach of spring rains and the possibility of application of further sanctions against him.

He had taken no public notice of the Franco-British peace proposals.

PENALTIES GROUP MEETS

Referring to the projected meeting of the committee of 18 and possibilities of its postponement, Vasconcellos told the Associated Press:

"The object of the session of the committee of 18 was to see whether conditions had been realized which are necessary for making effective an embargo of iron, coal, oil and steel."

If peace negotiations were under way, he said, this would naturally affect the situation.

Italy's Army Leaders See Hard Fighting Ahead

Rome, Dec. 10 (AP)—Hard bayonet fighting by Italy's northern forces, an official communique said today, dispersed a strong Ethiopian body south of Addi Encate, near the Takkaze river, just west of the main Eritrean front.

This engagement was reported officially while war correspondents said Marshal Pietro Badoglio and General Rudolfo Graziani, Italy's commanders on the northern and southern fronts, both foresaw possibilities of more serious opposition soon.

The government communique said:

"On the Eritrean front, our detachments encountered a strong group of Ethiopian forces near the Takkaze river in the region south of Addi Encelo.

"The adversary was attacked with bayonets and put to flight, leaving on the ground 15 dead. On our side, two Eritrean noncommissioned officers and five Askari were killed."

Ethiopians Claim Two Victories in North Area

Addis Ababa, Dec. 10—Ras Seyoum's armies won two battles on the northern front last week, scattering Italian encampments at Kalhabile December 2 and at Menagar the next day, the Ethiopian government said in a communique today.

"Fifty soldiers from the personal bodyguard of the traitor Haile Selassie Gugsa joined the Ethiopian side Dec. 5," the announcement added.

Paris Sees New Hope For Parley on Peace

Copyright, 1935 by The Associated Press

Paris, Dec. 10 — Encouraging signs that Premier Mussolini of Italy and Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia would agree to begin peace negotiations were reported in official circles today.

Il Duce seems inclined to discuss a settlement on the basis of the Anglo-French peace proposals, submitted to him unofficially, it was stated.

Haile Selassie, these sources stated, was expected to resign himself to exchanging part of his territory for a seaport and assurance that he would hold the remainder of Ethiopia.

A meeting of the French cabinet ended with the bare announcement that Premier Laval had informed his ministers of his conversations with Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary, and it was indicated the minor changes Britain desired in the proposals were acceptable to France.

France and England agree on what Italy shall have. Italy will think it over.

While the Madison avenue cowboy sings of his "Home on the Prairie," more Italian planes are bombing Ethiopian Dessye once more, and far more important, France starts a giant seaplane on a "tour of the Atlantic ocean to celebrate 300 years of rule in the Americas," referring to Guiana and the West Indian islands of Guadeloupe and Martinique.

England, peacefully squatting in Canada, thanks to Wolfe, the taking of Quebec, the English statesmanship, says to the French plane:

"Go on and celebrate."

Japan, causing new nations to come into birth, as primitive new animal life comes into birth in the ocean, by breaking a piece off the old animal, sees with delight "self-rule" established in North China over 95,000,000 Chinese.

Japan congratulates the "new country," expresses friendship, does not mention the fact that the real name of that "self-rule" is "Japanese rule."

British Back German and French Pact

(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service.)

Geneva, Dec. 10—Working quietly behind the Italo-Ethiopian peace "smoke-screen," Premier Pierre Laval of France and Foreign Minister Sir Samuel Hoare of Britain on Sunday in Paris laid the ground work for a Franco-German accord, it was learned here today.

Britain will co-operate in ending Franco-German friction which, many high quarters feels, is a source of potential danger greater than the present Italian situation.

Laval and Hoare spent more time on the German question than on the Ethiopian plan, discussing navies, the Rhineland, German conscription, and other points, according to Geneva information.

Word 'Shall' In Law May Jail Sailor

In the first case under the new "dangerous weapon" law, a 23-year-old seaman today faced 2½ years in state prison, although Judge Joseph H. Barnes said he did not believe the seaman intended carrying the knife found upon him.

Fred Jollimore of Nova Scotia, of the crew of the steamer Edward Farren, now undergoing repairs in East Boston, was arrested early today in Marginal street, East Boston, charged with drunkenness.

When searched, police said, a four-inch knife was found hanging from his belt. The additional charge of carrying a dangerous weapon was placed against him.

In court today, Jollimore pleaded guilty to drunkenness, but explained he used the knife aboard ship in rope splicing. He said he forgot to leave the knife aboard.

Judge Barnes said he believed the seaman's story and was about to dismiss the charge when a check on the new law, passed last May by the Legislature, revealed it was compulsory to impose a state prison sentence of two and a half years on any person carrying a dangerous weapon.

The judge is given no alternative. In most statutes the word "may" is used. In the new law the word "shall" is used.

Pattangall Joins Republican Party

Augusta, Me., Dec. 10 (AP)—Former Chief Justice William R. Pattangall of Augusta, for many years a Democratic chieftain in Maine, enrolled as a Republican on the local board of registration today.

CLASS LEGISLATION

"I again urge upon Congress the danger of class legislation, so well calculated to keep the public mind in a state of uncertain expectation, disquiet and restlessness and to encourage increased hopes and fears that the federal national government will continue to furnish to classes of citizens in the several states means of support and maintenance regardless of whether they pursue a life of indolence or labor, and regardless also of the constitutional limitations of the national authority in times of peace and tranquility."

—PRESIDENT ANDREW JOHNSON to the House of Representatives, July 16, 1866.

JAPANESE PERIL NAVY PARLEY

ment rejecting the American proposal for an all-round reduction of as much as 20 per cent was interpreted as amounting to a flat refusal to discuss any question until Japan is assured absolute equality.

If Japan refuses to budge from this stand, the conference may speedily be torpedoed—some pessimists talked of a break-up within a week—but the outlook was for a long-drawn-out task.

The British government issued a communique which read:

"The first meeting of the first committee of the naval conference took place at 10:30 a. m. After a consideration of the questions of procedure there was a continuation of the general discussion of matters entered into in the plenary session.

ALL STATE VIEWS

"The head of the United Kingdom delegation made a statement to the committee as regards qualitative (size and kinds) and quantitative (total tonnage) naval limitation, Part IV of the London naval treaty (dealing with submarines and the laws prohibiting the sinking of passenger vessels without assuring the safety of passengers and crew), and the provisions of the Washington and London treaties.

"Statements on these issues also were made by the principal delegates of the United States, Japan, France and Italy.

"The committee then proceeded to the discussion of quantitative limitation."

The Japanese, because of this attitude, will support the proposal for a discussion of quantitative limitation first, and if the debate ever reaches that point, another wide divergence will come over definitions of defensive and offensive vessels.

WANTS MANY "SUBS"

Japan wants abolition of big battleships and cruisers and aircraft carriers as "offensive," but retention of submarines, which Britain regards as likewise offensive.

Admiral Nagano also rejected the fundamental American thesis of "equality of security," saying:

"We must first set a common upper limit of tonnage, then study the question of vulnerability."

British and American experts pointed out, however, that the former had a widespread empire to defend and America has two long coastlines, besides Pacific islands and Panama Canal routes, while Japan can concentrate her fleet behind well-fortified islands in a limited area.

For this reason, then, the United States is in a position to threaten fortification of the Pacific islands and the Aleutians, off Alaska—which the Washington treaty forbade—if Japan fights for equality.

France, Britain and Italy all coldly received President Roosevelt's 20 per cent cut suggestion, for France and Italy both want bigger navies and Britain is clamoring for 20 more cruisers.

'Big 5's' Navy Demands

London, Dec. 10 (INS)—With Japan's demand for unqualified parity as the chief stumbling block, here are the demands of the five powers at the London naval conference as set forth by their delegations:

UNITED STATES — All-round reduction up to 20 per cent; in no case any increases; retention of treaty ratios; fortification of Pacific islands if ratios abolished; big battleships; "equality of security."

GREAT BRITAIN — Prolongation of Washington and London treaties "with modifications necessary on account of altered international circumstances"; 30 more cruisers; smaller capital ships and guns; abolition of submarines.

JAPAN — Actual parity on total tonnage basis, to be established before discussion of limitations by classifications or "equality of security."

FRANCE—Superiority over Germany and Italy; limitation in the light of "interdependence" of navies and land and air armaments.

Purpura Denies State Job "Sale"

Cross-examination of Angelo Purpura, 26, charged with larceny of $1300 in the alleged "sale" of State jobs, resumed today in the continuation of his trial before Judge John M. Gibbs in Suffolk Superior Court.

At the outset of his cross-examination yesterday Purpura said the two transactions, one for $750 and the second for $550, were straight loans and had nothing to do with promises of securing State jobs.

Love Notes Link Widow, Boy to Death

Pembroke, Ont., Dec. 10 (INS)—Sensational details of a triangle which already has placed a 17-year-old boy in the shadow of the gibbet were unfolded through love notes today before the Ontario Supreme Court hearing the murder trial of Mrs. Mary Cowan, 26.

Mrs. Cowan is on trial for plotting the murder of her husband, Albert, 28, last July 21. Allan Cowan, 17, brother of the dead man, has been convicted of the actual slaying and is waiting sentence to hang. If convicted, Mrs. Cowan also may hang.

The notes, which the Crown claimed told of Mrs. Cowan's passionate love for her boyish brother-in-law, were found crumpled in Allan's pockets, together with marbles and a tin whistle.

"Knives are going through my heart because I love you so much," one letter declared.

"I can't be without you," another said. "That's what makes me so lonesome, and I am asking you if you are going to do something to him or not."

The notes were signed "Mary," and "M."

The letters were admitted as evidence over the violent protests of Mrs. Cowan's attorney, C. A. Mulvihill, who alleged they were fabrications by young Allan.

Allan alleged the death bullets were given to him by Mrs. Cowan.

BIRTH Control STORM

LEADERS REPLY TO CARDINAL

New York, Dec. 10 (US)—Cardinal Hayes' sermon of Sunday condemning birth control aroused a storm of controversy in religious and social welfare circles today.

The American Birth Control League called upon the cardinal "to prove" his statements criticising a birth control mass meeting in Carnegie Hall last week. The cardinal asserted the position of the Catholic church was "misrepresented" at the meeting.

In its statement the Birth Control League said:

"Cardinal Hayes evidently was misinformed as to the character of the meeting on birth control and social crisis which took place in Carnegie Hall on December 2. He seems to be under the impression that the audience was composed of wealthy persons who wished to force the poor to use birth control information.

Says Poor There

"The audience was made up largely of representatives of social organizations serving the poor. Many people on relief were present.

"The very nature of scientific birth control makes it impossible to force anyone to use this information. However, the league holds that to discriminate against families on relief by withholding from them the knowledge necessary to limit their families if they so desire is undemocratic and unjust.

"The resolution unanimously adopted by the 2500 persons at the meeting demanded that 'all agencies administering family relief inform mothers on relief where they may secure medical advice as to family limitation by methods in accord with their religious convictions.'

"The American Birth Control League advocates good-sized families or four and five children when the mother's health and the family finances will permit. We believe that to bring children unwanted into homes dependent on charity or relief is unfair to the child, the parents and the nation."

Dr. Hannah M. Stone, medical director of the birth control clinic research bureau, said:

"The cardinal very clearly restated the position of the Catholic Church on the subject of birth control and one must, of course, highly respect the Catholic attitude and point of view.

"Eminent leaders of other churches, however, do not regard the practice of contraception as either immoral or sinful."

Miss Helen M. Harris, head worker at the Union Settlement:

"The important point is that the poor should not be penalized by inability to get the birth control information that is available to others able to pay physicians."

Insres Party Guests

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Insurance for $250,000 was taken out by this Hollywood hostess, red-headed Grace Bradley of the curves and the contours, for protection of guests at her hay-ride and barn-dance party, one of the season's most elaborate affairs. Attending the party were more than 450 filmland notables. They were transported in 20 huge trucks, filled with hay. Miss Bradley paid $1800 for the insurance policy covering possible accident and injury.

Hollywood, Cal., Dec. 10 (INS)—Party insurance, the newest fad for Mollywood hostesses, is believed to have reached a new high here over the week-end when Grace Bradley, red-headed film actress, had guests at her hay-ride and barn-dance covered against accident or death for the sum of $250,000.

The barn-dance, to which 450 filmland revelers were transported in 20 trucks filled with hay, was one of the most spectacular parties in recent Hollywood history.

Insurance coverage was put to the high figure because of the possibility of accident on the hay-ride and because many of the stellar guests had earning powers running into thousands of dollars a week.

Norma's Alias Fails To Outwit Curious

Her Comeback Attempt Is Marred

There will be no alias for Norma Brighton Millen when she sets out on the latest chapter of her exciting career today in New York.

For Norma, the electric chair widow of a vicious criminal to whom murder was only an unexciting incident to robbery, is thoroughly disgusted and disappointed at the attempts to hide her notoriety under an assumed name.

These attempts have been so heartbreaking, she revealed, that today she sets out under her own colors, let the world think what it will.

The brown - eyed minister's daughter, who served 18 months in jail for her part as an accessory to the crime outrages, has been studying in a New York beauty school under the name of Arline Wright.

Had to Give Up

She enrolled after her late August release from the Dedham jail, admitting secretly to the school her real identity.

But she soon found that even her false colors could not gain for her the normal place in life which she sought.

Strange people, obsessed with the pursuit of the notorious, ran her down. She was constantly annoyed with invitations she did not want to accept.

So she has given up her alias.

Today she again becomes Norma Brighton, in a challenge to the world to let her forget her past and strike out anew.

This was the name she bore when Murton Millen, the bank bandit and killer, lured her into secret marriage with the aid of lavish gifts, gay parties, theater tickets and a high-powered automobile.

Located by Too Many

As she charted her latest course in a life that has spread her name across font pages of newspapers throughout the land, Norma revealed her plans.

"I came to New York wishing to keep out of the newspapers," she declared in that city today.

"I really tried to learn a means of getting a decent living. I found it was impossible.

"I have been located by too many persons. I feel guilty when I walk along the street because of my duplicity. I am ashamed of my assumed name.

"Everything has been so unpleasant that I think the only thing to do is to tell people who I am.

"All I ask for is a better break in the future. Now that I have named myself, I hope they'll all leave me alone."

Today and every day you will find excellent used cars advertised in the Automobile-for-Sale Columns of the American and Advertiser.

Taxicab Slugging Charged to Youth

Kevin C. O'Donovan, 20, of Washington street, Cambridge, faced arraignment in Dedham district court today charged with assault with intent to rob a taxicab driver.

Paul Barry, 26, and Richard J. Powers, Jr., both of Dedham, told police they were sitting in one of their cabs when O'Donovan asked to be driven to Dover.

Upon arrival there, they said, O'Donovan directed them to the Davis estate in Glen street, Dover. As the cab swung through the gates, Barry was struck a savage blow on the head by O'Donovan, who wielded a hammer handle.

Stopping the machine, Powers grappled with the youth, overpowered him and both cab drivers tied him up and returned to Dedham, where he was turned over to police.

Kelly Proposed For Farm Post

Shaun Kelly, Sr., father of the Harvard football captain, has been urged for the post as commissioner of agriculture, and Governor Curley is considering the matter. Vigorous protest to the appointment of Howard H. Murphy, of Osterville, to the post has caused a hold-up of confirmation by the executive council. Murphy was named two weeks ago by Curley.

MRS. ROOSEVELT BEST DRESSED

Picked No. 1 in Capital

The National Capital is noted for the gayety of its social functions, its smart women. The question has frequently been asked: Who are the best dressed women in Washington? In the following article, Marie Manning, famous woman writer, selects them.

By MARIE MANNING
International News Service Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service)

Washington, Dec. 10 (INS)—Time was when a well-dressed woman was so smothered in ostrich plumes that her head resembled one of those birds of paradise, with its prow tucked in the sand. And her figure, with its buttons, puffings, and ornamental cord, was not unlike an overstuffed sofa.

Today, the keynote of the well-dressed woman is self-restraint. Sport clothes, clothes for the cocktail hour, dinner or dancing, do not go the limit, as you recall the limit in the photographs of stage or professional beauties.

The nation's capital has some of the best-dressed women in the world, presumably because they don't come here until their husbands have arrived, or their individual achievements or check-books permit them to land on their own account.

President's Wife

And speaking of the ten best-dressed, no one is more suitably dressed for every occasion than the wife of the President. Perfectly groomed, never spectacular, Mrs. Roosevelt's clothes are eminently correct, whether she is receiving the brilliantly-uniformed diplomats at a State dinner, or eating a Scouts.

Mrs. Cordell Hull goes in for rich effects, but never overdressed.

Madame Prochnik, wife of the minister of Austria, and her daughter Valerie, whose engagement to Jean Dubour has just been announced, are both exhibits "A" when it comes to distinction in dress.

These ladies are such artists that they think nothing of getting up at five o'clock in the morning to create and assemble lovely clothes. "Paris," everyone declared, on seeing the finished effects, till the Prochnik ladies invited a few intimates to their sewing room, or, as everyone calls it, their studio.

Mrs. Francis Whitten is almost clairvoyant in anticipating fashions a year or two in advance of everyone else. She appeared in dashing cossack effects before the most-advanced stylists dreamed of them.

Madame Sokolowska, wife of the Charge D'Affaires of Poland, goes in for those halo effects in hats, which display to ullest advantage, her lovely dark-red hair.

Mrs. Tracy Dows is the type of woman who wears her sables well, and just the right accessories to go with them.

Mrs. Robert Lowe Bacon, wife of the representative from New York, looks equally stunning in her well chosen sport or evening clothes.

Madame Munthe De Morgenstierne, wife ofthe Norwegian minister, and Canadian by birth, favors gray, and nothing could be more becoming than this neutral shade which she selects for almost every occasion.

NEW EVIDENCE ON LADDER IN BRUNO FIGHT

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 10 (AP)—The fight to save Bruno Richard Hauptmann from the electric chair started anew today with what his lawyer said was new evidence on the kidnap ladder.

Hauptmann's plea for a United States Supreme Court review denied, his counsel planned another attack on "rail 16" of the ladder, one of the chief prosecution exhibits in the conviction of the Bronx carpenter as the kidnap-slayer of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

C. Lloyd Fisher, chief defense attorney, predicted "disclosures more or less sensational" in his attempt to disprove government testimony that "rail 16" of the ladder was made from a floorboard in Hauptmann's attic.

Since the highest court's one-word refusal to reopen the conviction, only two principal courses of action remain for the convicted slayer. They are:

1—Application to Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, Flemington trial judge, for a new trial on a possible claim of new evidence.

2—Application to the court of pardons for commutation of Hauptmann's death sentence to life imprisonment.

Justice Trenchard is to receive the trial record as soon as official notification of the supreme court's action is received from Washington.

If he denies an appeal for a new trial, he must fix a new death date not less than four weeks nor more than eight weeks after he receives the record.

A recent conference was disclosed when it became known Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, Ellis Parker, chief of Burlington County detectives, and Dr. Erasmus Hudson, New York physician, discussed the case.

Dr. Hudson was a defense witness at the Flemington trial, where he testified "Rail 16" contained only one nail hole when he examined the ladder two weeks after the kidnaping.

Parker Admits He Has No New Bruno Evidence

Mount Holly, N. J., Dec. 10 (INS)—Ellis H. Parker, the world-famous country detective whose activities in the Lindbergh case the last few days have created great confusion in state political circles, today admitted he hasn't a single shred of new evidence in "the crime of the century."

"I have never had any new evidence in the Lindbergh case," the gray-eyed rural detective told International News Service.

"I talked the case over with Governor Hoffman, just as I'm talking it over with you. I told him I think Bruno Richard Hauptmann is innocent, because the state didn't show one damned thing to prove he was guilty.

"All I gave Governor Hoffman was a logical, intelligent analysis of the case and the testimony.

Untold Story of Lindbergh Crime; 'Hot Money' Traps Hauptmann

Girl's Suicide Mystery in Crisis

The jigsaw puzzle of evidence and how it was pieced together by detectives seeking to identify the kidnap-murderer of Baby Lindbergh is graphically described herewith by Lon Wedemar, veteran reporter, who worked on the case from its inception, in the third of a remarkable series of articles. The first article was printed last Sunday in the Boston Sunday Advertiser and the second article in yesterday's Boston Evening American.

By LOU WEDEMAR

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service, the Boston Sunday Advertiser and the Boston Evening American. Republication in whole or in part strictly forbidden by the Boston Sunday Advertiser and Boston Evening American.)

Although the authorities received nearly 500,000 letters on the Lindbergh baby kidnaping, questioned 25,000 or more persons, and studied in every way the few clues at the scene of the crime, not one of these contributed to the slightest extent in bringing into custody Bruno Richard Hauptmann. When he had been arrested this investigation helped to entrap him, but in no way did it lead to his arrest.

The kidnaping itself was a "perfect crime," insofar as concerns the leaving of clues by which the perpetrator might be traced.

And the arrest of Bruno Richard Hauptmann came only through chance, although the early clues helped materially in his conviction.

For more than two years the most intensive money-search in history had been under way.

Colonel Lindbergh, paying $50,000 ransom for his son, had permitted—after some objections—agents of the internal revenue bureau of the Treasury Department to list the serial numbers of the bills. The Treasury Department began seeking these bills as soon as the ransom was paid—and one turned up 24 hours later in a Manhattan bank. The kidnaper, or his accomplice, had started spending the money immediately, the authorities decided. They expected an early arrest.

Fateful "X"

But although every effort was made to trace this bill to its spender, and scores of other bills which were found afterward, it was not until late in 1934, when the ransom money was being spent more carelessly that the agents had any success.

In the meantime the handwriting on the ransom notes had been studied by the world's leading handwriting experts, and they had come to the conclusion that the writer was a "Central European, probably German." They declared also that the writer was probably well educated, and that the writing was disguised—or that one person, the cultured one, had dictated the note, and that an almost illiterate and entirely uneducated man had done the actual penning.

One character in the writing—the letter X—was so distinctive as to seem a certain identification of the actual penman. I, personally, seeking the kidnaper of the baby—or at least the note-writer—searched more than 5000 specimens of aliens' writing, and thousands of other specimens without finding a single "X" like the one on the notes, which was like a letter U, or a script double-E.

"X" Laid Waiting

Yet the difficulty of seeking out a single man in a nation of 125,000,000—many of them aliens, and not registered in any Central alien bureau; few of them fingerprinted—is shown by the fact that the X was never traced to its author before Hauptmann's arrest.

And all the time, on automobile license applications in the motor vehicle bureau, that unique X was waiting for anybody to see—on the application blank of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

It was first brought out after he was arrested. Furthermore, I discovered, in his auto applications he changed that odd X to a conventional one—the year after the kidnaping!

Again, the ladder was traced insofar as possible. Wood in it came from a Bronx lumber-yard, but the purchaser was unknown.

The chisel found outside the nursery window was traced to its maker, but not to its purchaser. The ransom letters were traced to various mail-boxes, but not to the writer.

Baffling Suicide

The letter-paper was found on sale in many 5 and 10-cent stores.

Dozens of men answering the description of Dr. Condon's "John the Swede" were questioned, but all were released.

Scores of persons who had been host to mysterious babies were troubled by police, but all were exonerated. Many criminals who had been in New Jersey at the time of the kidnaping were under suspicion, but none was linked to the crime.

The underworld sought in its own ranks for the kidnaper, and failed.

And hundreds of automobiles, answering the description of the "black sedan with a ladder in it" seen by Benny La Pica, were examined—all in vain.

To complicate matters still further, shy young Violet Sharpe, maid at the Morrow home, contributed a sensational—and still baffling—climax, by committing suicide as police were waiting downstairs to question her as to her companions on a motor ride the night of the kidnaping. There was no motive for her suicide except fear of the questioning; and to this day no one knows what it was she feared to tell.

It was not until a gasoline filling-station attendant received a $10 gold certificate one day in September, 1934, that the chase neared its conclusion. Gold certificates had been recalled by Presidential proclamation—as the nation went off the gold standard.

But what drew the attention to the attendant was merely his suspicion that it might be a counterfeit.

As the motorist who had paid with it for some gasoline drove away, the attendant wrote his license number on the bill. When this bill reached the bank, one teller failed to spot it as a ransom bill.

The next day another teller recognized it. The fact that two men, for the first time in two years and a half, had paid attention to the same ransom bill was what really led to the arrest of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

The trail from the scene of the kidnaping had not led to him. Instead, he himself had left a trail of "hot money," which, when it was picked up, sent a thrill of hope through the many agencies which had all but admitted themselves beaten.

(In tomorrow's article in the Boston Evening American Lon Wedemar shows how the authorities matched their evidential "jig saw puzzle" to Hauptmann —and how it came about that he was never tried for kidnaping.)

This money and its wrappings were found in the home of Bruno Richard Hauptmann. He insisted they were the property of Isador Fisch and denied guilty knowledge of their source.

6 JURORS STILL SURE OF BRUNO'S GUILT

Mrs. Rosie Pill | Elmer Smith | Mrs. Verna Snyder | Mrs. Ethel Stockton

Condemn Delay in Hauptmann's Death Sentence

Flemington, N. J., Dec. 10 (INS)—Bruno Hauptmann's life was demanded as immediate forfeit today by six more of the jurors who condemned him to death for the brutal murder of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr.

Ten jurors have already vehemently reaffirmed their original verdict which began the final bleak chapter in the erratic history of the wooden-faced felon.

Mrs. Verna Snyder, the Centerville smith's buxom wife, bluntly voiced her chagrin at the delay in exacting the penalty for Hauptmann's crime. She asked:

"What are they saving him for?"

"If it were any other murderer, he would have been dead long ago. In this case, everybody is trying to get something out of it—some political advantage, or money, or anything.

"The man is absolutely guilty and no amount of talking or politics is going to change that. The sooner they kill him the better."

Elmer Smith, the youngest man on the jury, decried the obvious effort in certain official quarters to delay the course of justice to satisfy those whose "hare-brained" theories conflict with the jury's conclusion.

"Of course, there is a vague possibility that Hauptmann may have had an accomplice," Smith admitted.

"And it is also barely possible that time may bring forth new facts.

"But if we delayed the execution of every murderer in the hope that new evidence would be discovered, there wouldn't be room for them in our jails.

"The evidence clearly proved that Hauptmann murdered that poor child and he must die for it."

Mrs. Ethel Stockton, the youngest jury woman, concurred with her fellow-jurors at the office of Hunterdon County Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, where she is employed as a secretary.

"My opinion as to Hauptmann's guilt hasn't changed one whit since last February," she stated.

"Nothing has come to my attention which in any way indicates his innocence of the terrible crime for which he was convicted."

At the Hilltop farm in Clinton, Charles F. Snyder derided the notion that Hauptmann's guilt was not certainly proved.

"The handwriting, the money, and the ladder put that man in the death house, and he'll never leave it alive," said Snyder.

"There is no reason for reopening the discussion of this case. The man is guilty and he should be destroyed. That's all there is to it."

Mrs. Rosie Pill of Califon and Lincoln C. Case, the aged carpenter from Lanadown, both adhered to their convictions.

"Nothing has happened to make me change my mind," said Mrs. Pill shortly.

Case, confined to his home with a weak heart, said:

"I feel just the same now as I did when we gave the verdict."

QUIT QUIBBLING BERRY WARNS

Washington, Dec. 10 (AP)—George L. Berry, industry co-ordinator, today told business to "quit quibbling" over whether his proposed Economic Council is representative, and to remember that the government is a partner "in this co-operative effort, and that it represents all the people."

Taking the aggressive against industry claims that groups called in conference here have almost unanimously opposed his council, Berry said:

"We are going forward in the work of setting up an industrial council, exactly as originally planned."

Berry said the issues of unemployment and a stable prosperity "cannot be swept aside by political consideration or by unreasoning opposition to a course of action which is definite in scope with industry's problems in the light of solutions that they best guard the entire nation's welfare."

Brown to Battle Townsend Plan

Concord, N. H., Dec. 10—Hurling defiance at threats of political reprisals if he did not support the Townsend pension plan, United States Senator Fred H. Brown today declared that he was unalterably opposed to the scheme and would continue to vote against it.

BRUNO TO MAKE PERSONAL PLEA FOR PARDON

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 10 (INS)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann today was preparing to voice the final plea for his life in his own guttural accents.

He was not surprised nor greatly disappointed when the United States Supreme Court refused to review his conviction for the murder of Baby Lindbergh.

He had seen his lawyers fail in the state courts. He was not to be upset when they fared no better before the highest tribunal in the land.

Now he is preparing to act as his own lawyer before the Court of Pardons in what promises to be one of the strangest scenes ever enacted in a criminal case in this state.

The thrice-doomed carpenter will, according to the most reliable information, address the august court of pardons in a room of the state prison, where he now awaits death or in the electric chair, if present plans of those in authority carry through.

Members of the court of pardons are Governor Harold G. Hoffman, State Chancellor Luther A. Campbell and six judges of the state court of errors and appeals. They wield the power of pardon, parole or commutation.

Never before in the history of the state has a court of pardons gone into the State Prison to hear the plea of a condemned man. But neither had a governor ever gone into the State Prison to interview a doomed inmate until Governor Hoffman paid his secret visit to Hauptmann in the death house on the night of last October 17.

And it was Hoffman who said that every member of the court of pardons should personally hear Hauptmann's story.

The youthful governor has admitted to reporters that the court of pardons may hear Hauptmann's story in the prison rather than in the State House.

BOOST IN MILK PRICE SOUGHT

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Dec. 10 (AP)—An increase of one cent a quart in farmers' milk prices, which would boost Boston consumer prices one cent, was demanded today at the opening of public hearings on a new Federal marketing agreement for the Greater Boston market.

The price boost was formally requested by W. H. Bronson, statistician, on behalf of the New England Milk Producers Association and the New England dairies.

Boston consumers, who now pay 11 cents a quart for over-the-counter milk and 12 cents for home delivered milk, would if the increase was granted pay one cent a quart more.

Bronson approved the general provisions of the new agreement and urged immediate restoration of producers' prices in effect until last July.

The present federal license became ineffective at that time after Federal Judge Elisha H. Brewster ruled the license "void and unenforceable."

QUINS NOW PRAY

Taught Sign of Cross by Nurse

Callander, Ont., Dec. 10 (INS)—The Dionne quintuplets are learning to say their prayers.

Each morning when they arise and in the evening when they retire, Nurse Yvonne Leroux kneels down with them, one by one, beside their individual cribs and repeats a prayer.

Doctor Allan Roy Dafoe, their kindly physician who has raised them into healthy, strong children from their premature birth, said today four of the children have learned to make the sign of the cross and remain motionless while their nurse repeats the prayers

Marie, the smallest of the girls, still looks on in awe and casts quizzical looks at her nurse as she holds her in a kneeling position twice each day.

The famous children who are receiving $50,000 for their appearance in the 20th Century-Fox Production of "The Country Doctor," were reported to be in excellent condition by their doctor.

Today may be their last appearance before the movie camera, as Director Henry King learned from Darryl Zanuck, production head of the studios in Hollywood, that the film already taken and rushed to Hollywood by special plane was excellent and far exceeded the anticipations of the heads of the film company.

3 National Guard Officers Promoted

Three promotions in the Massachusetts National Guard were announced today by the chief of the National Guard Bureau in Washington.

Clarence Andrew Hayes of Roberts road, West Medford, was named a major in the 1st Battalion, 182nd Infantry. He served overseas.

Bernard Blackburn Cavanagh of Otis street, Everett, was promoted to a captain, and Everett Brown Meserveau, Walnut street, Everett, a first lieutenant. Both are attached to the Howitzer Company, 182nd Infantry.

Peabody Recount To Lane by 1 Vote

Peabody, Dec. 10—In a recount completed today, Lawrence T. Lane, 26-year-old baseball player and leather worker, was declared the winner for city councilor over Edwin A. Durkee by the margin of a single vote.

Durkee, a truck farmer, has been a councillor for four full terms covering the past eight years.

"One run is as good as a million—at the end of extra innings," Lane smilingly declared as the recount result giving him 706 votes to 705 for Durkee was announced.

BOY IN COMA 12 DAYS

Rallies Slightly at Mother's Kiss

Framingham, Dec. 10—Warren Stone of Union street, Ashland, Thanksgiving Day automobile accident victim, went into his twelfth consecutive day of unconsciousness today in Framingham Hospital.

Only once since he was hurt in a crash in Hopkinton while returning from a football game has the 17-year-old boy shown any sign that he was coming out of his puzzling coma.

That was today, when his mother, Mrs. Frank Stone, sobbed, "My darling boy!" and the youth raised his arms and responded to his mother's kiss.

Today also, the doctors in consultation in an attempt to discover what is continuing the boy in an unconscious state, announced his pulse, temperature and blood pressure had returned to normal.

Jesuits Open Fire:

1000 STUDENTS RECEIVE PRACTICAL PROGRAM

(This is the third in a series on the first anti-Communism school in America.)

By ALAN C. FRAZER

(Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American)

Philadelphia, Penn., Dec. 10—At the opening of classes of the anti-Communism school at St. Joseph's College, the American Jesuits' program for social justice was distributed publicly for the first time.

Accepting the challenge of the Communists, who declared they alone had a practical and complete sociological plan, the Jesuits of America recently prepared this program covering human activities.

Every one of the 1000 young men and women, who came to St. Joseph's high school for the first evening classes in the only anti-Communism school in America, was handed a copy of this social program.

Groups of 200

The opening of classes found the Jesuit fathers of St. Joseph's using all the large halls, the debating rooms, an old chapel and other spacious quarters to accommodate the throngs.

The course in history began in four large assembly rooms, with a separate instructor for each group of 200 and more, and the other courses also had to be divided into sections.

Very Rev. Thomas J. Higgins, head of St. Joseph's, said:

"The Communists' plan of a social order is a series of negations and declaration of hate, plus a demand for an all-powerful state, which would dominate men, body and soul.'

"It denies God, eternity, immortality and individual freedom, declares for class war, class hatred, violent revolution and dictatorship by one class, and it exalts the all-powerful universal state.

"Every Communist preaches the overthrow of the government of the United States by force.

"Their program is a destructive one. It not only would destroy the American conception of the state, as embodied in the Constitution and the immortal words of some of our great Americans, but it would destroy man as an individual, fix the grave as his goal and claim even the clothes he wears for the state.

"We do not approve the injustices that exist in this world. No one can deny that there is oppression and tyranny in many human activities.

Own Newspaper

"But nothing can be obtained by negations. The world cannot be reformed by the state or by despotism, either of the state or of a class. It can be improved by faith, by reason and by brotherly love."

The Jesuits' program, which here has its first newspaper publication, being presented as a subject of broad news interest, repudiates "hatred and greed in whatever aspect"—unjust war, class warfare, exploitation, unbridled competition, all forms of permanent dictatorship, all forms of injustice and all forms of oppression.

It demands, as rights, whatever guarantees to the individual and the social group, liberty, opportunity, peace and justice.

It asserts, as of prime importance, the human person and the general good.

It asserts that the family is a natural society and the primary unit of civil society, with rights prior to and independent of the state.

Duty of State

The duty of the state, this program asserts, is to facilitate all that tends to stabilize a family economy.

It asserts that the state is a natural institution, a corporate moral person, which exists for the individual and not the individual for the state.

"Ultimately, the state holds authority from God as an instrument of the common good which it must promote," the statement continues.

"Both individual and family precede the state in origin and have natural rights not derived from the state. Therefore, the state may never interfere with, but must reasonably aid them, and protect their rights.

"Private ownership, in itself a right of nature, must be held inviolate.

"The law should favor ownership by as many as possible, especially of land, as a guarantee of social stability.

"Private ownership has a twofold aspect; individual, violated by the Socialist and Communist; and social, violated by the exploiter.

"Public ownership is permissible within limits set by the common good, which can never require total abolition of the natural right of private ownership.

"In regard to the use of property, we recognize the evils of undue concentration of wealth and the exploitation of the masses; we see the solution by a widespread distribution of private property, not through confiscatory methods, but through a more equitable distribution of income.

"This reform is not only required by justice, but also for the sake of the better administration of wealth itself. This reform is realizable under the system of private property, provided that certain reforms are admitted."

Defending American Liberty With Truth

In small classes, like this first one to meet, are organized the more than 1000 enrolled students in the anti-Communism school founded at Philadelphia by Jesuit fathers of St. Joseph's College. Instruction is on the political and social history of America, with emphasis on the growth of Red propaganda. Scores of groups of this size will meet regularly, each in its own assembly room.

OLVANY GIVES SHOOTING TIP

shooting affair that should make a good story for you. I can't give it to you right away, though. You'll find most of the details in this note."

He then handed me an envelope on which was written:

"Not to be opened until 2 a. m." Shortly before 2 o'clock I opened the envelope and found this startling communication:

"Dear Jerry:

"The story I told you about 'broke' this morning. Enclosing taxi fare so you won't be in the hole if it isn't of interest. Get a taxi to take you to the beach opposite the Ampersand boat house. The story should be near my car. Couldn't give you the details beforehand as I was afraid you might get hurt and I didn't want any innocent parties to get the blame. Drop over to my room later. Tallyho!

"GEORGE."

Horrified, I hurried to the spot mentioned. Olvany was lying on the ground unconscious, with blood pouring from his two wounds. Another note said:

"Please send the corpus delicti to Connolly (an undertaking establishment). I don't like Fortune company. This should be a lesson I won't forget. Sorry to drag you all out in the cold and snow, but I didn't want to mess up the room or the car. You'll find a blanket behind the back seat and a drink on it. Consideration, I calls it. Pax vobiscum!

"George W. Olvany, Jr."

Another note was addressed to his father, and still another to Miss Sidney Schafer of 47 Waterman street, Providence, R. I.

Fiancee Speeds to Side Of Wounded Olvany

Providence, Dec. 10—Revealing herself as his fiancee, Miss Sidney Schaffer, 23, a beautiful blonde artist, announced today that she was speeding to the side of George W. Olvany, Jr., wounded in a suicide attempt at Saranac Lake, N. Y.

"If anybody can help him, I can," sobbed Miss Schaffer, to whom Olvany addressed a note before shooting himself.

Olvany once threatened to attempt suicide here, she said, but she dismissed him.

LOSES HOME

This was an ill-fated day in Miss Schaffer's life.

Early this morning she was burned out of her small apartment in Waterman street.

A few hours later came word that her fiance had shot himself.

"His condition was such that things you and I would consider trivial appeared big to him.

"I knew if I was there this never would have happened. I'm going at once to be with him."

No date had been set for their marriage, Miss Schaffer said, because of Olvany's health.

"I met him here while I was taking a post-graduate art course at the school of design. He was studying at Brown and we met at a Brown dance.

"We were just friends at first, then it began to mean more than friendship to us both. He means everything to me.

"Sometimes he's in good spirits and sometimes he is despondent. He tried to do this once before in Providence but I stopped him just in time and he promised me he'd never do anything like that again.

PLANNED TRIP

"Everything that worried him he referred to me. I intended to go to see him last week-end because I knew something was bothering him, but he telephoned that everything was all right.

Miss Schaffer's family resides in Detroit.

Eludes 20 Police, Hail of 15 Shots

Fifteen shots were fired at a suspected automobile thief during a chase early today in Concord, in which twenty Concord, Lincoln, Weston and State police participated.

The man escaped, stealing a second automobile from the yard of Warren R. Pollard, 3 Hubbard street, Concord, to make his getaway.

Sergeant Marshall J. Witherell of Concord first chased the suspect for two miles, firing three shots in an attempt to halt him. The thief abandoned the car in Lincoln and ran into the woods.

Sergeant Witherell followed and engaged in a hand-to-hand fight with him, but despite the fact that the thief was hit on the head several times with the sergeant's club he escaped.

Patrolman Alfred Baptist of Concord saw the thief and chased him into a swamp, firing five shots.

Missing Tots Return

Two children, reported missing yesterday, are safely back home in Cambridge today. They are Billie McCormack, 6, of Decatur street, and Helen Curil, 10, of Magnolia avenue.

2 Marooned Fliers Saved, 3 Missing

Cristobal, C. Z., Dec. 10 (AP)—American army and navy planes today rescued two Americans marooned on an island after their army bomber nose-dived into the water last night, but sought three other victims of the crash.

The plane's pilot, Lieut. John A. Sanford and Air Corps Private Roland F. Dufor, were picked up suffering from shock and exposure on Orange Key Island, 10 miles from Cristobal in the Atlantic.

Ten army and navy airplanes were searching for Staff Sergeant Golan Blunden, a native of Catalina, N. F., Private William Cooper, of Charlotte, N. C., and Private Joseph Bergeron, son of Mrs. Julia Bergeron, Woonsocket, R. I.

Three boats aided in the search. Parachutes and a life raft had already been discovered, but there was no sign of the missing three.

Today and every day you will find excellent used cars advertised in the Automobile-for-Sale Columns of the American and Advertiser.

Child Drinks Poison Used for Cleaning

Poisoned by accidentally swallowing cleaning fluid today, one-year-old Mary Benn, daughter of William Benn of Houghton street, Somerville, was rushed by her father to Somerville Hospital.

According to the father, the child had been playing about the house when she found a preparation used for cleaning stoves. The can was tipped over and the top came off, whereby Mary, apparently thinking she had something new to drink, consumed some of the contents.

AL SMITH MAY LEAD FIGHT ON ROOSEVELT

By George R. Holmes

International News Service Correspondent

Washington, Dec. 10—President Roosevelt returned to the capital today with the framework of his campaign for re-election already sketched in broad outlines.

His speeches in Atlanta, Chicago and elsewhere during his weeks of absence left no doubt that Mr. Roosevelt proposes to fight it out on the record, experiments and all.

The real beginning of the Democratic campaign, however, is chalked down for January 8, when the Democratic national committee will be assembled in Washington to choose a convention site and make arrangements for the campaign. There will be a big Jackson Day dinner at which Mr. Roosevelt will be the chief speaker.

OPPOSITION BUSY

Simultaneously there will be dozens of other Jackson Day dinners throughout the country, listening to their own oratory and to the President. Plans call for an extensive radio hook-up, linking these Democratic love-feasts in one great evening of Democratic congratulation and rejoicing.

But the opposition is not going to be idle, either. According to plans, the American Liberty League, arch foe of the administration, is going to follow the celebration of Jackson Day with a demonstration of entirely different character.

The league is going to have a dinner of its own, with all the fanfare that it is possible to throw around an event patronized by such distinguished names.

The league is negotiating with the broadcasting companies for time on the air.

AL SMITH TO SPEAK

And the chief speaker, if plans workout, will be no less a personage than Alfred E. Smith, one of the charter members of the league. It is also hoped to prevail upon John W. Davis, another charter member, to speak. The league wants sto blanket the country with speeches that will take the edge off the Democratic rejoicing on Jackson day. The league wants to put on its show within a week after the Democratic celebration, a reply to Mr. Roosevelt.

Smith and Davis are two of the most prominent Democratic names associated with the Liberty League.

Aids Own Rescue As Building Falls

Lowell, Dec. 10—Trapped in a cellar beneath the wreckage of a building that collapsed, Alfred Peterson of Burns street shouted his own rescue directions through the debris to firemen and volunteer rescue workers today.

Peterson, employed as a building wrecker, was working in the cellar at 453 Gorham street, when the partially demolished building collapsed.

Firemen and police were summoned, as were building wreckers and builders from all over the city to assist in rescue work. Police said the work would require two or three hours.

Harvard Boys Not Adults, So There!

Harvard students are "not adults," they might have learned today if they had been present at the Copley Plaza.

The assertion was made by Dr. Lyman Bryson of the Teachers' College of Columbia University during the second day's session of the New England Conference on Adult Education, which closes tomorrow.

Today's session was crowded to the doors with educators and the public for addresses by several speakers and the public discussion which followed.

The reference to Harvard students came after Dr. Fred C. Smith, registrar of the Harvard Graduate School, explained that the system at his school was to allow the students to "tell the teachers what the students think."

"We are talking about adult education," said Dr. Bryson, presiding at the meeting. "Harvard students are not adults."

11,650,000 Still Idle, Says Green

Washington, Dec. 10 (AP)—The American Federation of Labor today estimated unemployment, as of October, at 11,650,000 persons. It said this compared with 15,470,000 in March, 1933.

William Green, president, said the 11,650,000 included 3,000,000 jobless now employed by New Deal emergency agencies.

"Today," Green said, "with a half recovery of business we still have with us 74 per cent of the depression unemployment."

N. H. Holds Boy, 11, as Auto Thief

Concord, N. H., Dec. 10 (AP)—The youngest motor car thief in the history of New Hampshire, an 11-year-old boy, was arrested in Hooksett today after he had driven 15 miles in a car he stole from a welfare day. The league will try to put on its show within a week after the Democratic celebration, a reply to Mr. Roosevelt.

Smith and Davis are two of the most prominent Democratic names associated with the Liberty League.

The youth, who told police he had been driving automobiles three years, had been taken to a hospital by the welfare worker for examination, as his family was on relief. While the welfare worker was in the hospital the boy drove off in the car.

Dec. 14 Deadline On Irish Santa Mail

Letters and parcels for persons in the Irish Free State must be mailed for Christmas delivery before December 14, it was announced by Postmaster Peter F. Tague today. He said that date also applies to Austria, Belgium, Denmark, England, Sweden, Scotland, France and Germany.

Clipper Speeds Toward Honolulu

Almeda Airport, Cal., Dec. 10 (INS)—Cruising westward over the Pacific at 146 miles an hour, the Philippine Clipper at 7:30 a. m. (PST) today had covered 1885 miles since taking off from Alameda airport at 3:17 p. m. yesterday and had 515 miles to go before reaching Honolulu.

ROTCH REPLIES TO CURLEY ON JOBS

Although he is authorized to employ only 113,700 workers as a Massachusetts WPA quota, Administrator Arthur G. Rotch has put 120,000 men to work, he said today in replying to an attack by Governor Curley.

The governor's attack, made both against Rotch and Mayor Mansfield, was in a launching of a "work and wages" program to absorb 2700 unemployed men in the state.

Rotch, who is state administrator for the WPA, declared that he has no money or projects to take care of more workers.

There are now about 168,000 persons in Massachusetts on welfare or soldiers' relief, he said, and without additional projects and money he cannot absorb them all.

The governor charged the federal government with delaying co-operation with the state to such an extent that immediate and drastic action was necessary.

PLANS SIDEWALKS

In addition, the Chief Executive tossed into the mayor's lap the responsibility of finding work for Boston's unemployed who are unable to get on WPA payrolls.

The state project will be conducted by the Department of Public Works and will be paid for outright by the Commonwealth, with no help from Washington.

According to Curley, the work will consist of construction of sidewalks along the highways outside of Boston, and will be financed with the remaining $3,000,000 of the $4,000,000 bond issue approved by the Legislature.

Such action, Curley said, was necessary because Rotch has informed him that 120,000 men on relief rolls who worked under the ERA have been absorbed by the WPA and there is no further room for non-relief workers.

WHAT CURLEY SAYS

Curley said it was "unfortunate" that there were no sidewalks to be constructed in Boston and that no highway beautification was necessary.

Because of this, he said, the state's money would go to cities and towns outside Boston where unrelief still employables are out of work.

In case the federal authorities do decide to co-operate with the state, an undetermined sum was ordered set aside to take care of such a contingency, Curley said.

Children Abused, Mother Jailed

Rockford, Ill., Dec. 10 (AP)—Two small children, their emaciated bodies deeply scarred, were being treated for frozen feet and other injuries today as authorities investigated cruelty on the part of their mother.

Physicians said they were doubtful the children, Mary Lou Madonna, four, and her sister, Theresa Jane, two, would recover.

The mother, Mrs. Dorothy Madonna, 27, was in jail. She has four other children and is an expectant mother. Her husband, Joseph, is serving a jail term for larceny.

LAUDS DRIVE ON REDS

Ex-Sen. Moses Flays Communists

Lawrence, Dec. 10—Leadership of the Catholic Church and the American Legion in the war against Communism was praised by former Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire in an address at the Chamber of Commerce here.

Activities of these two widespread organizations, the former senator told 1200 listeners, saved the Constitution from any peril at the present time. He asserted:

"There is no fear that Communism will gain a foothold here as long as the Catholic Church exerts its policies unhampered and as long as the American Legion remembers the lessons learned on the battlefields of Europe."

He also repeated his opposition to the League of Nations and declared the present international policy of the Roosevelt administration, if pursued, "might draw us into another war."

He took time to hand a bitter slap to the Raw Deal, which he characterized as a "pistol pointed at the heart of New England."

He admitted, however, that people of the city and communities in New Hampshire appeared more prosperous and contented than 10 years ago, despite the effects of the Raw Deal.

President Roosevelt, he declared, was giving away control of the seas and Secretary of State Cordell Hull was responsible for the giving away of American trade. Meanwhile, he charged, the New England delegation was sitting dumbly in Congress allowing this Raw Deal legislation to pass without opposition.

Speaking of New England, former Senator Moses said:

"New England is taxed to the limit. This section, whose thrifty people have saved approximately $800 per capita, has been taxed in such a manner that the taxes have gone to the West and have created new industries there, developed railroads and built cities. The communities which have profited from these taxes now consider New England people as enemies."

TWO DIVIDE $25 PRISON BREAK TIP AWARD

By THE NEWSTIP EDITOR

Equally simultaneous were their calls to the Newstip Editor of the Boston Evening American and in the same manner they will receive checks for $12.50 each, splitting the first award of $25 in the weekly American-Sunday Advertiser news contest.

Fast work enabled the Boston Evening American to deliver first papers to the scene of the break, EVEN AS GUARDS PURSUED THE PRISONERS through the Boston and Maine freight yards.

Second prize of $10 goes to a person whose name was given to us by a tipster who phoned the exclusive tip about the strike looming on the Narrow Gauge railroad. He said:

"If this tip is worth anything to you, send it to someone who needs the money more than I do."

He gave us the name and he can now be assured the person he named will receive the $10.

Third prize of $5 goes to a Jamaica Plain woman who first discovered and phoned the American that a national brand of meat carried beneath the paper label the warning: "Packed by ERA—Not To Be Sold."

Jointly, the American and Sunday Advertiser investigated the circumstances, and then turned the case over to federal authorities, who still are working on it.

Ordinarily the next ten prizes are $1 each, but this week one $2 prize was awarded to a Charlestown oil dealer for the first, tip on the $7000 still raid in Needham Heights. Eight other persons were awarded $1 each to bring our total of $50 for News Tip awards.

AWARDS OF $1

More details on the Charlestown prison break by a woman cashier led the list of dollar winners. The others were:

Injury to a fireman when an automobile on Eastern avenue, Chelsea, exploded; boat ashore off Sandwich with two men aboard; Everett boy missing for three days; live wire down on Meredian street, East Boston; auto crash, two dead, in Quincy; runaway horse on Commonwealth avenue, which caused injury to a Boston police officer, and the story of an ill-fated cat and a car of beef at North Station.

Each week salesmen, truck drivers and men and women in all walks of life are included in our list of prize winners.

THE SENATOR SAYS:

Mike Ward 'Makes Up'—So There Goes 'Swifty!'

'Roosevelts' Buddy' and Jim Coo a Dirge For Mr. Hays

THE SENATOR:

He sees all and knows all that's going on in Massachusetts politics and most of it he finds amusing or amazing, often both. Best of all, he tells about it.

Meet him below and listen in with him regularly in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

"You mean Winken, Blinken and Nod," says Timmy.

"I mean Jim and Jimmy and Mike," says The Senator. "Jim Curley, Jimmy Roosevelt and Mike Ward. There is a trio. They are all together again. The Governor had a mad on Mike, but now they are all cooing. So there goes Swifty."

"Swifty?" says Timmy.

"Martin Hays," says The Senator. "Who else?"

He does not say any more at once because he starts making a sandwich out of the free lunch, which is a sort of WPA project you can only whisper on. The Senator is a very deft free lunch sandwich maker. He is deft in one ear and cannot hear the wisecracks with the other.

First he takes a cracker, and on the cracker he puts a snack of kippered herring, and on the herring he puts a piece of cheese, and on the cheese he puts a dash of cole slaw, and on the cole slaw he puts a slice of bologna, and on the bologna he puts a small fish cake, a sprinkling of salted peanuts and two pieces of buttered popcorn. Then he starts looking around.

Looking for Pickles

"The steam shovel is working in the next lot," says Timmy. "Or do you want the whipped cream?"

"I am looking for the pickles," says The Senator, with his usual dignity.

There is a refill on the pickle bowl and The Senator adds one piece of pickle and a top cracker.

Timmy asks will he take a chaser of soda with his Leaning Tower of Pisa, and The Senator says:

"I will take an ale. Just an ale. I am not myself today, so I will take an ale."

"That's three ales," says Timmy, hinting.

"One ale," says The Senator, "but see what the boys will have."

We all order ales, too, on account of The Senator considers it a personal insult if anybody drinking on him orders anything that costs more than what he is drinking. There are groans and expressions of regret that The Senator is not himself.

Like Singing Duets Again

"Yes," says The Senator. "The Governor and Mike are singing duets again and Mike is Jimmy Roosevelt's buddy, so this all looks very bad for Martin Hays, very bad, indeed.

"Mike has taken his furniture and moved out into Martin's Ward 21, where Martin has been the Republican boss since 1910, and Mike is going to run against him for Representative in the fall. I hear they are not very good neighbors, Mike and Martin, on account of this. That is, they are not playing bridge together nights.

"The outlook is bad for Martin on account of several things. You will remember that Martin voted for Jim's bond issue last year and this put him in wrong with a lot of Republicans.

"Still, this would have been all right if Jim and Mike had continued making faces at each other, because Martin might have had the Governor's underground support next fall. Only now, the Governor will support Mike and a lot of Republicans will not support Martin.

"Mike is the fair-haired boy. Mike is the buddy of all the little Roosevelts. He does everything with them except ride in their cars. Mike is a very smart man.

"The Governor has a warm spot for Mike because Mike was his secretary and the Governor thinks Mike is just like he was himself in the old days in Roxbury, and this is about true. Mike can turn votes out of a clothes wringer.

"Mike has organized himself the Andrew Jackson Club out in Martin's Ward 21, and this outfit is standing off Martin's Henry Cabot Lodge Club, and unless the Governor gets another mail on Mike I will predict that Andrew Jackson takes Henry Cabot Lodge at the next election.

"And Mike has always got Jimmy in the background even if the Governor gets another mad on him. Jimmy is down in New York now, but he keeps in close touch with Mike. So there goes Swifty."

"You are crying in your ale," says Timmy.

"Timmy," says The Senator, "I am not crying. And besides there is something in the pickle bowl. Look!"

Timmy leans over and looks.

"It is a pickle," he says.

WELFARE UNITS VIE IN FUND CRUSADE

Continuing its demonstrations of the activities of Boston's charitable agencies, "Come and See—Go and Tell" week, sponsored by the Women's Crusade, resumes tomorrow with a lengthy program.

The series of demonstrations are in behalf of the 100 agencies participating in the 1936 Community Fund Campaign.

Friendly competition will be engaged in tomorrow by day nurseries, family welfare groups, settlement houses and others, with demonstrations of their specialized activities.

A tour of the various house plans under discussion will be conducted by the Boston Housing Association, when a bus leaves 41 Mt. Vernon street at 2:30 p. m.

At 41 Hawkins street, the Social Service Index, conducted by 11 Boston agencies to prevent duplication, will also be open for inspection. The Index is said to be the most extensive of its kind in the country.

OPEN HOUSE PROGRAM

The program of Open Houses for Wednesday:

10:00-11:00—Social Service Index, 41 Hawkins street. The social service index is consulted by every agency in Boston to prevent duplication of relief in behalf of individuals. The index is the most extensive of its kind in the United States.

10:00-12:00—South End Day Nursery, 35 Dover street.

10:30—Household Nursing Association, 226 Newbury street. Open house.

10:30-12:00—Social Services Department of Boston, City Hospital, 818 Harrison avenue. Demonstration of work done by this department of the City Hospital.

1:30-2:30 — Catherine Moore House (Catholic Charitable Bureau), 11 Tileston street. An interesting Italian Mothers' Club. Meets for singing, dancing and recreation.

2:00-3:30—Sunnyside Day Nursery, 18 Marion street. Open house.

2:30-3:30—Family Welfare Society of Boston, Crosstown District, 57 East Concord street. Crosstown district, extending from the Charles to South Bay, is socially, as well as literally, a cross section of the city. Tenements rub shoulders with fine old residences that are now shabby lodging houses. In its tiny kitchenette apartments live hundreds of white-collar families upon whom the depression has borne down with peculiar difficulty. The district secretary will conduct its visitors.

2:30—Boston Housing Association, 41 Mount Vernon street. A tour of Boston has been planned to show the various house plans which are under discussion. A bus will meet the group at 41 Mount Vernon street, for which there will be a charge of 25c.

2:30-3:30—Morgan Memorial, 89 Shawmut avenue. Open house.

4:00-5:30—Elizabeth Peabody House, 357 Shawmut street. Open house. Tea will be served.

7:30—Little House, 73 A street, South Boston. Open house.

8:30—International Institute, 190 Beacon street. Interesting national groups, such as French group, and Swedish Folk Dancing group may be visited.

Broadway Lures Missing Students

Providence, Dec. 10 (AP)—The lure of the lights of Old Broadway is the answer to the disappearance of six Rhode Island State College students, who left here for the college at Kingston Sunday and didn't arrive.

When relatives and friends began to worry about their absence, police were notified, but this morning fellow-students received postcards from New York showing Grant's Tomb, a hotel (with an X to mark "our room") and the Aquarium.

The six students, all members of Beta Psi Alpha fraternity, are Albert J. Calderone, Arthur F. Decesare, Louis Perotta, Lorenzo Rotondo, Joseph Iannuzzi and Stephen C. Campanella.

Steamer Refloated

Christiansted, Virgin Islands, Dec. 10 (AP)—The Norwegian steamer Borgfred, four days aground, was floated today apparently undamaged, after a quantity of cargo had been jettisoned.

GOVERNOR CURLEY SENDS CHECK TO BASKET FUND

Governor James M. Curley, making his customary contribution to the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, today, stressed the need for holiday aid to the helpless and hopeless.

"In common with every other citizen of the Commonwealth, I had sincerely hoped that there would be no occasion for the customary distribution of Christmas baskets by any agency this year," his letter read.

"Apparently, from the number of requests which have been received by all of the agencies engaged in this most meritorious work and, notwithstanding America is rapidly emerging from the depression, there is still an opportunity for service to the needy.

"I congratulate your splendid enterprises upon this most essential work and assure you it is a pleasure to make my customary contribution of one hundred dollars.

"Sincerely,

(signed) JAMES M. CURLEY.

With both Cardinal O'Connell and Governor Curley urging support of the 23rd Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser, the drive to fill thousands of baskets went into its next-to-last week today.

NEED GREATEST

Never before has the need been so great—an average of 1500 appeals per day coming to the Christmas Basket Fund Editor from the needy families of the Greater Boston area. All are being listed and checked.

Thursday evening at the Brunswick, Boylston street at Clarendon, the beautiful "Casino Room" where Eddie Elkins' radio orchestra is featured, will be the scene of a Christmas Basket Fund benefit. Miss Janice Carroll, young nightingale of the "Casino," will be star of a sparkling program of entertainment provided.

Commencing at 8 o'clock a de luxe dinner will be served by the management, headed by L. Marshall Thompson and Ernest Borden, managing directors. Priced at $2.50 per person, a generous percentage of the proceeds will be turned over to the 23rd Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American-Boston Sunday Advertiser.

ELKINS' MUSIC

Dancing to the music of Eddie Elkins' Orchestra will continue until 10 o'clock when the floor show commences. In addition to Miss Carroll—"The G-Girls"—16 dancing starlets directed by Gertrude Dolan will appear in the floor show.

"The G-Girls," whose symmetry of figure and precision in executing difficult dance routines remind one of the English "Tiller Girl" units, are making their initial Boston appearance.

In addition to the smooth melodies of Eddie Elkins and Miss Carroll there will be a long list of headline attractions represented during the course of the evening. One novel feature will be the appearance of the little McNamara brothers — Billy, aged seven, and Paul, four years old.

The youngsters are currently featured in an R-K-O film "short" recently released and do song-and-dance routines like veteran troupers.

BROWN DERBY PARTY

Following the Brunswick benefit night, Anthony Brado's Brown Derby will have its own Christmas Basket Fund party next Sunday evening, the Brown Derby, located in Arlington street near Stuart is unique as a night club.

The Brown Derby, too, will have the 16 "G-Girls" as one of the features of Christmas Basket Fund Night. In addition to the regular program of entertainment there will be another special bill composed of leading stage and radio performers. Jim McHale, genial leader of the Brown Derby orchestra, will act as master of ceremonies.

As in the case of Club Mayfair and The Brunswick, the proprietors of the Brown Derby are contributing a generous percentage of the receipts to the 23rd Christmas Basket Fund.

FROLIC AT ARENA

"A Skater's Dream"—star feature of the Gala Skater's Frolic of the Olympic Skating Club at Boston Arena—is another Christmas Basket Fund benefit. It takes place Saturday evening from 8 to 12, at the Arena, and admission tickets, priced at only 40 cents, are on sale at Basket Fund Headquarters, 204 Devonshire street, just off Summer. Telephone Liberty 4000.

Tomorrow, Wednesday evening, at Boston Garden, the all-star indoor football game between a team of All-Notre Dame stars of Knute Rockne's coaching opposes an All-Collegiate eleven. Details of this colorful contest, in aid of the Christmas Basket Fund also shares, will be found in the Sports Section of this edition of the Boston Evening American.

Meanwhile appeals for aid continue to pour in on the Christmas Basket Fund Editor. Pitiful stories of privation, and untold of near-starvation, pile up with each incoming mail.

Following are a few of the appeals received:

CASE NO. 31

Basket Editor
Dear Sir:

I write you these few lines to ask you if you couldn't please help me for Christmas.

I am on the Welfare and get nine dollars a week. I pay four dollars and a half rent out of that. At the present time we are very badly in need of help. My husband was hurt in an accident and has not been able to work.

I have a boy and girl both loafing and also a boy five and a half years old going to school. He hasn't anything to wear but a summer overcoat and summer underwear. My husband and myself need shoes very badly and I am still wearing my summer coat.

If you could kindly send us a basket, it would brighten up things as I have no other way of getting help unless you remember us.

This family lives in Hyde Park. Anyone who wishes to help them may do so by calling the Basket Fund Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for case No. 31.

CASE NO. 32

The Christmas Basket Fund
Dear Friend:

Just writing you a few lines asking you if you could do us a favor and send us a Basket for Christmas as we did not have anything only bread and weak tea for Thanksgiving Day.

My husband is only making seven dollars a week and we're expecting the stork soon and it would please us both if you would be so kind as to think of us at Christmas Day. If you don't send us a Basket we will go without anything, the same as we did Thanksgiving Day.

We have all we can do to get along. My husband only works two days a week and the rest of the week he is loafing. I wish to God he could get a job some where as it would help out very much with the baby coming.

I cannot get the right food to eat on seven dollars. We have nothing in store for it so if you will do us that favor you will not only be helping us but the little soul that is coming into this wide world to make his way, so I hope and pray that we will not be forgotten.

I will close my letter hoping I won't be forgotten.

This family lives in Boston. Anyone who wishes to help them may do so by calling the Basket Fund Editor, Liberty 4000 and ask for case No. 32.

CASE NO. 33

I am writing you this letter to ask you if you would be kind enough to remember me and my family this Christmas, as we are badly in need and would greatly like a basket.

This is the first time I have ever written to you and this time I really am in dire need. So for my children's sake I hope you will not forget me.

There are seven children and they are all in need of clothes and shoes and I am a sick mother and am not able to go out and do anything to help them much. What my husband makes at the WPA does not half nourish the children.

I hope and trust you will not forget me this Christmas, as it is the first time I have ever written to you.

This family lives in South Boston, anyone wishing to help them may do so by calling the Basket Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for Case No. 33.

CASE NO. 34

Dear Sir:

I am the mother of six children and my husband has been sick for five years and I don't think he'll ever be able to work again. He is under the care of the Massachusetts General Hospital. I am asking you to please send a Christmas basket so that I can make my children happy this Christmas.

I hope you won't disappoint me this year. I got your basket last year and it made us all so happy, and I want to thank you very much.

I wish that you won't forget us for my children are waiting for this one happy day.

This family lives in East Boston. Anyone who wishes to help them may do so by calling the Basket Fund Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for case No. 34.

Governor's Check for Basket Fund

A check for $100 is Governor Curley's gift to the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund. Receiving the donation is Miss Ruth Burns, Christmas Basket Fund secretary. In a letter to the Christmas Basket Fund editor, the governor commends the purpose of the fund and emphasizes the reality of the need it meets. (Other Pictures on Page 19.)

TOYS IN PLACE OF TICKETS

Elaborate plans are being made for the second annual Toy and Canned Food performance in aid of the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American, to be given at Loew's State theater, next Saturday, December 14, at 9:30 a. m.

All food and toys collected at this performance will be donated to the poor of Boston.

Here is one show where no cash will be accepted for admission. All that is required to admit you is a toy, new or old, or some canned food. And everybody is welcome.

Surely you must have a toy about the house that you've wanted to dispose of because sonny had no longer any use for it. Here is your chance. Bring it to Loew's State theater next Saturday morning. It will admit you to this special benefit performance which Stanley Gosnell, manager of Loew's State, and H. M. Addison, division manager for Loew's, are personally supervising, and which will be made up of Our Gang comedies, Silly Symphonies, Mickey Mouse, cartoons and novelties. The show begins at 9:30 promptly and will run close to two hours.

If you can't find a toy, bring along a can of food. It will be just as welcome. Perhaps you would like to bring both. Do! It will permit a more liberal distribution.

Remember, everybody is welcome; grownups as well as youngsters. We urge the parents to bring their children. They'll have the time of their young lives and at the same time help to bring a little cheer into the hearts of many unfortunate youngsters.

GOVERNOR CURLEY'S LETTER
Commends Christmas Aid for Needy

Hyde Park Youths Seized After Chase

New London, Ct., Dec. 10 (AP)—The gasoline tank of their automobile pierced by bullets two Hyde Park, Mass., youths were arrested today by state police following a chase from Groton to this city.

The pair, Robert Baldwin, 17, and Everett Haifinger, 17, were charged with stealing an automobile owned by Margaret Freeman of Hyde Park and with burglarizing a grocy store on their way through Stonington.

Cuba Millionaire Held by Kidnaps

Havana, Dec. 10 (INS)—Nicholas Castano, 40, wealthy Cienfuegos sugar mill owner, whose fortune is estimated at more than $20,000,000, today was being held by kidnapers for a ransom demand variously rumored to be between $125,000 and $600,000.

BASKET APPLICATIONS MUST BE APPROVED

In order that Christmas Baskets may go only to deserving and needy families, each application must be approved by a priest, a minister, a rabbi, or charitable organization. If you wish to apply for a basket, therefore, get the signature of one of these persons.

A special effort to reach needy families not receiving city aid is requested.

Address all names and lists as well as contributions to the Christmas Basket Fund, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston.

'RULE ALL AAA ILLEGAL,' PLEA TO HIGH COURT

Washington, Dec. 10 (INS)—The Supreme court was told today by George Wharton Pepper, former U. S. Senator, that it may put the farmer on the "auction block"—to be sold to the highest bidder—if the AAA is held constitutional.

Arguing against validity of the processing tax in the Hoosac Mills case, he urged the high court to render a sweeping decision holding the entire AAA scheme unconstitutional.

Pepper asserted that while many sections of the country favor the AAA, it is extremely unpopular in other sections.

SELLING FREEDOM

"If the local policy of the state in the matter of production is at war with that of the federal government, the court will be in the position of putting the farmer on the auction block—with the federal government bidding for compliance with a federal scheme and the state bidding for compliance with a local regulation, if this is valid," said Pepper.

"If it is to be possible for the federal government to offer pecuniary rewards where the farmer cannot well decline, he sells his freedom for a mess of pottage."

NOT VOLUNTARY PLAN

Pepper asserted that the AAA plan is not voluntary. A farmer must accept rental benefits or he cannot compete with his neighbor, he said.

Ridiculing the AAA referendum on continuation of programs, he said that he could make a better showing by asking college students to vote on whether or not they favored continuation of allowances by fathers.

The court followed Pepper intently. No justice interrupted him in the early stages of his discussion to ask a question.

Crowley Gains In Recount

Brockton, Dec. 10—History repeated itself in the first hour of the recount of votes for mayor today when Lawrence E. Crowley, mayor-elect, gained a block of 80 votes in Ward 3, Precinct A, which had been credited to Mayor Howard C. Baker by 5 years ago in the same situation developed in the same ward and precinct.

As a result Crowley's official canvass total of 212 votes majority over Baker rose to 312. In the official count of votes cast Tuesday, November 26, in the city's seven wards and 20 precincts Crowley received 12,609 as against 12,497 for Mayor Baker.

Mayor-elect Crowley's net gain of 100 votes seemed certain to clinch his election, observers said.

Haverhill Man Dies of Beating

Haverhill, Dec. 10 (AP)—An autopsy determined today how Charles Keefe, 58, beaten a fortnight ago, died, but police still had no information as to his assailant.

Dr. John C. O'Toole, medical examiner, said Keefe, a barber, died of a brain injury and a fractured cheek bone. Before he died last night, Keefe told police he had been attacked but did not know his assailant.

Boy, 14, Ends Life After His Dog Dies

Sacramento, Calif., Dec. 10 (AP)—Homer Lee, 14, was found shot to death in his room, a shotgun at his side.

Nearby lay the body of his pet, a black and white bulldog which had died years ago.

A note said:

"My best pal will never come back. Neither will I. The world can go on without us."

Another big party to benefit the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund will be held at the Brunswick Hotel Thursday night. Here, Orchestra Leader Eddie Elkins is preparing a list of songs for pretty Janice Carroll, who will entertain for the goodfellows.

BULLET SELLER FINED

Lynn Man Appeals in Death Case

On an unusual charge growing out of the alleged target-practice murder of Howard Jones, 17, a Lynn hardware dealer, Joseph Blumberg, was fined $100 in Lynn district court today.

Blumberg was accused of selling pistol ammunition to a minor possessing no firearms permit.

The minor in question, Howard Goodell, 16-year-old Lynn school student held on a murder charge, was taken to court from Salem jail on a writ of habeas to testify against Blumberg.

He testified Blumberg sold him 50 cartridges for 20 cents an hour before Jones was killed—and that Jones supplied the money for the bullets, one of which ended his life.

Police contended that the cut-down .22-caliber rifle used in the fatal shooting came under the classification of a pistol and that Blumberg failed to inquire from Goodell, as the law demands, whether the ammunition was for a rifle or pistol.

Goodell testified Jones stayed outside the store with the gun while he went in to buy the cartridges, because they were afraid if Blumberg saw the gun he would not sell both bullets. It being illegal to sell bullets for a pistol unless a permit is possessed by the buyer.

Goodell said he bought cartridges for the same gun from Blumberg on two previous occasions.

Blumberg appealed the finding of guilty by Judge Reeve and was bound over in $100 for superior court.

BAUER BATTLES GAS RATE RISE

If the Boston Consolidated Gas Company is permitted to increase rates, thousands of families that have been using it will go back to oil, it was predicted today at the State House by Dr. John Bauer, representing the city of Boston.

Dr. Bauer, expert on rate schedules and values, asserted the new rates proposed by the gas company would increase the average monthly bills of consumers 16 to 18 per cent.

"The only people who will benefit," he said, "will be the wealthy."

The fight against the rates is being made by the city, with Assistant Corporation Counsel Lewis H. Weinstein leading the battle.

For the average consumer who uses about 2000 cubic feet of gas a month, the increase would be about 16 per cent, it was pointed out at the hearing. Heavy penalties for slowness in paying are also included in the proposed new schedule.

C. S. CAHILL DIES IN CAMBRIDGE

Dr. Charles S. Cahill, 71, of 31½ Prospect street, Cambridge, died suddenly at his home today.

For 49 years Dr. Cahill had been practicing medicine in this city. For 15 years he was chairman of the board of directors of the Cambridge City Hospital. And to him goes much of the credit for the building up of that institution.

He resigned as chairman of the board November 31, 1931, but maintained his interest in the hospital.

Dr. Cahill was vice-president of the Central Trust Co. and a member of the board of directors of the Inman Co-operative Bank.

He was born in Cambridge, April 11, 1864, attended Cambridge schools and was graduated from Harvard Medical School with the class of 1886.

Dr. Cahill was the son of the late John and Mary McCarthy Cahill. He is survived by a brother, Dr. Thomas J. Cahill of Cambridge, and by four sisters, all of whom live in Cambridge: Miss Elizabeth, Miss Margaret, Miss Helen Cahill and Mrs. Mary Regan.

'Hair Tonic' Bandit Pair Captured

Indianapolis, Dec. 10 (AP)—Two wounded desperadoes, wanted for shooting two detectives and for questioning in the slaying of an Anderson, Ind., policeman November 25, were hauled from bed in a Milroy farmhouse and captured today.

Donald Joseph and Paul Pierce, both wounded in the gun battle, with Detectives Orville Quinette and Russell Chatham in Indianapolis Saturday, surrendered without a fight as nine state police surrounded the farmhouse.

The pair escaped Oct. 4 from the state prison farm in Michigan City, Ind., where they were serving 10-year terms for a series of Indianapolis holdups in which they gained the name "hair tonic" bandits because of their liberal use of a smelly concoction.

Seized with them today was Sylvia Headley, former fellow inmate of state prison, and his wife and daughter. The two women later were released.

Bowker Files Bill To Curb Fund Drive

A bill for issuance of peddlers' and hawkers' licenses only after approval by local authorities was filed today by Representative Philip G. Bowker of Brookline. Licenses are now issued by the state.

Bowker said he sought to protect the public from frauds, especially in organization drives for funds.

Charles E. De Land Dies

Pierre, S. D., Dec. 10 (AP)—Charles E. De Land, 81, pioneer attorney and author, was found dead last night of a heart attack. He was author of several legal and historical studies.

A sister and two brothers, George A. of Springfield, Mass., and Grove L., of Herkimer, N. Y., survive.

4 BANKS FREE CHRISTMAS FUNDS

The army of Christmas shoppers which police traffic experts estimate has already reached 200,000 daily was augmented today as a result of Supreme Court Bank Commissioner Henry H. Pierce's announcement that dividends totalling $438,000 have gone forward to depositors of four closed banks.

Bancroft Trust of Worcester, Medford Trust, Belmont Trust and Plymouth County Trust are the banks affected by Commissioner Pierce's release of funds obtained from liquidation of assets.

In two cases the dividend money was derived from loans on securities held by the closed banks which classified as slow assets.

The Belmont Trust Company is distributing approximately $125,000; the Bancroft Trust Company approximately $83,000; the Medford Trust Company approximately $162,000, and the Plymouth County Trust Company, Brockton, about $78,000.

DEWING FIGHTS DISTRICT SPLIT

District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing, prosecutor for both Norfolk and Plymouth Counties, today condemned the proposed split of the district with a district attorney for each.

"Were it not for the fact that the county government cannot afford at this time to enlarge the expenses of the tax payers," he said, "this movement might have merit.

"Those who are quoted as being in favor of the contemplated measure, favor a division in order that the counties might have six prosecutors instead of five, at a gross savings of $3000 per annum.

"Examination of the records of my office will disclose that I have been able to save the tax payers a tremendous amount of money.

"It might be of interest to the voters of Plymouth County to know that I was able to report to Attorney-General Paul A. Dever last Saturday that the criminal docket in Plymouth County is in a healthier condition than ever before."

Newton's Bette Davis and Her Stand-in

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Which is which? Can you pick out Bette Davis, the Newton girl who has won fame in movieland? Hollywood stars and their stand-ins have fooled many. Bette Davis poses for an inquiring photographer in the Warner Brothers studio, with Sally Sage, who has been her stand-in for nearly four years. It's Sally's job to take Bette's spot in a scene from the "Petrified Forest" or any other picture, and hold that pose while cameras are focused and lights adjusted. When this is done, Miss Davis faces the camera fresh and ready for action in the scene. All right, then, if you can't guess, here's the answer. The real Bette Davis is the one in the chair.

Fall's Condition Held Precarious

El Paso, Tex., Dec. 10 (AP)—Physicians said today the condition of Albert B. Fall, complicated by bronchial pneumonia, was precarious, despite slight improvement last night.

Today and every day you will find excellent used cars advertised in the Automobile-for-Sale Columns of the American and Advertiser.

Charlestown Men Spilled by Truck

Charlestown police tackled a minor mystery today, when a large express truck crashed into an Elevated upright in City Square and hurled out two men.

Edward Freeman, 53, of Bartlett street, and Charles Cadigan, 30, Miller street, Charlestown, were taken to Haymarket Relief hospital for treatment of contusions and abrasions and search were begun for the operator of the truck.

It's a long distance carrier and had been parked over night in a Charlestown garage.

Curley Gets 450 Christmas Appeals

Requests for more than 450 Christmas baskets have been received personally by Governor Curley. At the rate that the requests are coming in the governor said, the number seems likely to rise to 1000.

Mute Girl Learning To Talk Again

Dublin, Ga., Dec. 10 (AP)—After ten mute years in a Philadelphia hospital, 12-year-old Jean Ellington is learning to talk again, and is looking forward to the happiest Christmas she has ever had.

Jean came back to her home near Dublin last summer and started to school in September.

In 1925, Jean, stricken with diphtheria, was seized by a violent paroxysm. Her air passages had closed and she was choking.

In the emergency the family doctor, using a small pen knife, hurriedly made a small slit in the child's throat and blew into the incision until she began to breathe again. It saved her life, but her throat was paralyzed. Later, a tube was inserted in the opening through which she could breathe.

D. B. Daly Dies In Hingham Home

Daniel B. Daly, 50, died today following a heart stroke in his Central street, Hingham, home. He was chairman of the Hingham Democratic town committee, member of the board of registrars and Democratic state committeeman. His wife and two children survive. Mr. Daly had been stricken a year ago and until yesterday was thought to be recovering.

Cairo Quiet After British Foes Unite

Cairo, Dec. 10 (AP)—Street fighting, except for widely scattered small clashes, subsided today in Cairo after a month of intermittent battles between Nationalists and police.

The peace followed an announcement in the Arabic press that Egyptian political parties had agreed to present a solid front against alleged British domination.

PRISON UNREST STIRS GUARDS

While District Attorney William J. Foley moved today for indictments of the three survivors of the state prison outbreak last week in which two convicts and a civilian employe were slain, extra guards were being maintained at the institution as further unrest among inmates was noted.

That the tension aroused in the escape attempt has not been relieved was indicated in the attack on James E. Walters, notorious "lone wolf" lifer, who was slugged last Saturday for furnishing authorities with an eye witness account of the outbreak.

Discovery of a note threatening William A. McDonald, a lifer who went to the aid of the slain civilian employe, caused his transfer to the Norfolk prison colony.

Foley will seek indictments charging the trio with murderous attack, and expressed his belief that they will spend the rest of their lives behind the bars.

Dockmen Ordered Back

Houston, Tex., Dec. 10 (AP)—Members of the International Longshoremen's Association in Houston and Galveston were ordered to work today for shipping interests that reached satisfactory terms with the union. Union dock workers had been idle since the Gulf-wide strike was called October 11.

Vodka Down, Cosmetics Up In Russia

Moscow, Dec. 10 (AP)—A large decrease in the production of the famous Russian drink, vodka, was noted in the "light industry" figures for 1935 made public today.

The Soviet food industry was 2½ per cent over the annual production plan on Dec. 1, having already produced 79,000 tons more meat and 11,000 tons more butter than in 1934.

The vodka output declined by 9,510,000 quarts.

A total of 40,000,000 boxes of face powder were produced; there was a 50 per cent gain in tooth powder and a 13,000-ton increase in laundry soap.

Beer Price War Rages in Haverhill

Haverhill, Dec. 10—They are raising the steins with great vigor today, because the thirsty are taking advantage of a beer price war raging here. Despite an order of the licensing board, seven establishments are serving customers nine ounces of beer for a nickle and 18 ounces for a dime.

Although there is a strong protest from other liquor dispensers, the customers are not complaining.

I Want You Only Prints or Black Touched With White for Mid-Winter

By Elenore Meherin

By ANNICE BRINK

IT'S GETTING to be a grand fashion custom—this blooming of print frocks not long after winter closes down, leaving us only the window box and hot-house product for consolation. Flower prints have already appeared in the shops. Here is a bubble print in the same lighsome mood, modeled by Miss Alice Plimpton, Norwood debutante.

ALONG WITH watching snowstorms when you don't have to go out, with being the first to make your mark on a glassy sheet of ice, and along with a heartful of embers ready to roast chestnuts and pop corn, there's still another pleasure winter brings—the black frock with much crisp white lace and organdy to frame the face. So delicately gauzy are the lace and the twin flowers made of pleated organdy, which fill in the bolero of this mossy crepe frock, that the camera didn't catch all the detail. But that white froth is out especially to flatter a girl out of all proportion to her expectations!

CHAPTER 26

SUSIE went on with more and more lurid details. Two other young women slippered up noiselessly and joined in the narrative. They offered harrowing details of the births in which they had starred.

"If I were you," said one of them, "I'd go to that home on 154th street. They treat you grand. It costs $60 for ten days, but that includes everything but the doctor."

"You can get a good doctor for $50 more. You don't have to worry about paying him. Doctors can wait. That's where I went for Billy. Everything came out fine."

"Of course," Susie grabbed for the spotlight again, "you can go to a clinic. But who wants a baby on charity? And the social workers are just getting awful.

"They said to Annie Livermore, 'What right you got to have a fifth child when you can't support four or even three? We have no sympathy for you.' Like to see them talk that way to me!"

Nell went on to the apartment, trembling and sick. She did all the work. Even washing the sheets. But there was no money over. There wasn't going to be enough—even for food.

She would soon have to take from the funds Ricky sent. The baby's money. The sacred trust. She would have to have her child on charity.

One day she was wringing out sheets, Jimmy helping. Jimmy lustily chewed gum and talked with all his might.

"Say, Nellie, I'm gonna get that shoe-shining outfit I'm trading all my Western books and that old cowboy outfit. We won't do the washing then!"

He dropped the sheet. It dragged in the dust.

But Mason was smiling. Mason said pleasantly: "That's too heavy for you, boy. I'll do it."

Nell was bewildered. Her stepfather went on: "After this, leave the sheets for me to wring!"

The next afternoon Nell went out to do the shopping. She was crossing the street to the corner where the automat had a second-hand bakery.

She was about to enter the crowded store. Coming out of it she saw a trim, golden-haired girl laughing into the black, flashing eyes of Henry Mason.

The two of them went arm in arm nearly like a pair of lovers down the block.

Recrossing the street with her heavy bundles, Nell tripped and fell. She felt something tear away within her. She felt her heart die.

They picked Nell up. Two men. A little crowd gathered. She looked into the curious faces with a bewildered: "I'm all right," but her whole body dripped with fear. The fall had imperiled her child. She was sure of it.

The men helped her to the apartment house. She went slowly, in an agony of terror, up the many steps.

Nell dropped to a chair, folding her arms tight about her, shutting out the thump and panic of her heart. She wouldn't be able to bear it if the child were maimed or if it should now die.

She had seen too often, in imagination, the small, beloved face, blue, burning eyes, like his, and a flutter of honey-colored curls. A cherub child.

She had neglected it. She hadn't been to a doctor. All that talk of Susie and Mama Raskovitch filled her with dread so that she shrank from charity. Her pride seemed paltry now. It had endangered her child.

Through the gusty March night when a titanic wind hooted about her window, she lay awake praying that nothing had happened to her baby.

* * *

A clear, cold, beautiful morning dawned, with the sky a silky blue and the whole world washed clean by the hurricane. Nell was out early. She was going to the clinic.

The Woman's Hospital faces north on Cathedral Parkway. An imposing though gracious building, set high on its grassy eminence with two old oak trees standing guard.

At the Clinic

WOMEN'S OUTPATIENT CLINIC
Hours: 9-11—2-3

Nell stared at the sign as though it were in a foreign tongue. She was overborne with anxiety, all her blithe young courage at the lowest ebb.

It was not yet nine. Several women were already seated in the bare, white, immaculately clean waiting room. They were sprawled out in ungainly postures with big shopping bags in front of them. They chatted aimlessly and at ease.

Nell was led to a desk to register. She was given an appointment for the following week.

She looked at the card in panic. "Next week? I can't wait that long!" She told the nurse of her fall and the terror lest the child had died. She grew hysterical and begged: "Oh, please, can't they do something now?"

Finally, after much running back and forth, Nell was ushered into a tiny cubicle, handed a smock, told to get ready, the doctor would see her at once.

She lay on the operating table, her head light and her heart bursting. After what seemed hours, the young interne, who had a snub-nose and a shinily-clean face, said pleasantly: "You're all right. So is the young man."

"Of course not. But boy or girl it's plenty strong and should arrive in good shape about the middle of May."

A whole month earlier than she planned. But the doctor was certain. Nell had counted wrong.

"And you don't think it was injured yesterday? I dreamed it had only one arm."

"Don't worry about dreams. All women are tormented. There wouldn't be one of us born if the fears of our mothers beforehand could hurt us. You come for your tests. All should go along nicely."

Nell went out singing. They were so friendly. Glad Nell was to have a child and not a word said because she couldn't pay.

Standing before the entrance sign and reading it with bewilderment, as just an hour before Nell herself had done, was a shabby, wistful creature—pitifully young. The girl's eyes were brown and frightened.

Another's Tragedy

She glanced at Nell with a timid smile. "Is this the maternity clinic?"

"I've been told they say terrible things," suggested the girl, looking away from Nell's face. "Do they ask many questions?"

"They don't ask a single thing. They're really wonderful to you."

The lovely frightened eyes held Nell like a detaining hand. "Are you going to keep your baby?"

"Keep it?" Nell gasped. "Why of course!"

"I am, too," said the girl, crimson stain spotting her white throat and whiter cheeks. She was not more than 17. She wore an old tattered leopard skin jacket. She had a touching, defenseless air.

Nell could have wept as the girl smiled and walked into the clinic. She guessed her story . . . The coming of her child was tragedy.

Nell walked along Amsterdam avenue. How desolate not to want your child! How to go through this weary thing alone, no strong helpmate fighting and hoping at your side.

It was not a shrine she saw, but that little stage behind her found where they would soon be together and happy again. For the first time in months Nell looked to the future unafraid.

She took from her purse the card the young nurse had given her. Things she would need for the baby. Things she must buy for herself.

Deep down in her mind the everlasting worry gnawed and gnawed. "You can't spend the money. You have to save for food."

She felt defiant. Ricky had sent 90 dollars. Of this, 50 went to pay off their debt to Emily, 40 remained.

Ricky ached and struggled to send this money. It was for their child. The child should not be brought into the world without a stitch of clothes awaiting it.

Robbing Her Baby

She recalled suddenly her stepfather and the golden-haired girl with whom he had walked so blithely down 62nd street.

Should she rob from her child to keep a roof over Henry Mason's head and food in his stomach?

It was robbing from Ricky, too. She couldn't think of Ricky these days without a feeling of her very heart leap from her body and cross the world to him.

He wrote desperate, pleading, wildly passionate letters which made Nell afraid of the loneliness which so tormented him. Their separation was wrong. Sometimes she feared it might be suicidal to their love.

Ah, no! Love doesn't die no matter what test and pain it has to suffer. She would bring his little son so proudly to his arms.

They would be engulfed in tenderness and joy—they three together.

* * *

On a day of wild young spring-time with a tang in the breeze and the bluffs across the Hudson turned to gold, Nell started out on her shopping tour. She called for Mamie. Mamie would sew lace on fine lawn dresses. She would hem and feather-stitch and embroider.

It was Baby Day in a big department store. They found rare bargains. Tiny flannel wrappers in gay pink and blue for 19 cents; blankets two for a dollar; cotton shirts, 25 cents each.

"Please buy a bassinet and let me trim it for you," Mamie begged.

"I don't dare. They cost too much."

"But you can't let it sleep in a potato box!"

So they found a wicker cradle on a stand. It was crude but substantial. It cost $2. Mamie got a remnant of silk and padding. She would quilt it all so beautifully, with airy ribbons here and there.

She said dreamily in her stirring, profoundly tender voice as they sat over a sandwich and a cup of coffee in the cafeteria:

"It must be wonderful to love so greatly and then to have a child. No matter what happens, Nell, you've had the best of life."

"I think so, too," said Nell, warm, proud tears glistening on her lashes.

Regrets Again

Only as she climbed the apartment house steps did the gnawing worry get to the surface.

Her mind flung at her the accusation: "You spent $20. You're insane! You'll have to go on relief!"

At the third landing the young mother who had advised Nell about the Nursing Home stood at her door, idly chatting with a delivery man.

The girl was a hay-colored blonde with a red button of a mouth and round, twittery eyes. She waved good-bye to the man and turned beamingly to Nell: "My, you're short of breath. Is your husband coming back for the grand excitement? I was saying to Rusia he ought to show up if he ever intends to. Certainly a shame you can't leave your mother."

Nell gave cold, abrupt answers and went on, feeling crowded and weak. The girl's careless words flung distressingly in her face the menacing future from which all day she had been hiding.

She wasn't going to Rick when the baby was born. Rush away like a rat from a sinking ship and leave her mother to die unattended? She couldn't!

The alternative was grim. Bring a new-born child into this dismal abode? Try to care for it and her ailing mother, too? More forbidding yet was the prospect of prolonged absence from Ricky.

It would spell the end of her love and marriage. Beyond all doubt!

Well, sweetheart, don't tell me this crazy separation has to continue." Ricky wrote in a desolate letter. "I get so desperate thinking of you in that wretched apartment, working like a slave and probably in pain. I could go out and crack a safe to get the money to lift you out of it all.

"I see your white face in dreams. You come and look at me sadly; you vanish weeping. I'm driven mad with fear for you and shame for myself. A real man would find a way to end this outrageous situation. I've got to—

LOCKED BOX IS PUZZLE TO LILLIAN

By ADELE GARRISON
CHAPTER 219

LILLIAN GRINNED reminiscently at me as I asked her what Katie had said to Lillian's proposal that she clean the house and get ready for the guests at Marion's birthday celebration, "unbossed" by anyone.

"She said 'plenty beside her prayers'," she quoted. "In fact, I think part of her tirade consisted of prayers for me.

She outlined a history of the sufferings she had endured at housecleaning under your mothers-in-law, as contrasted with your mild and beneficent methods, and wound up with a torrent of blessing upon my head, and a declaration of 'I feex'. The result you see before you."

"Swept and garnished," I quoted, and Lillian nodded.

"It's a swell job," she said. "Do you know or what it makes me think as we stand here?"

"No, but it reminds me," I said hesitantly, "of a theater waiting for the curtain to go up for the first act of a play."

THE LAST ACT

"Go to the head of the class," she said. "That was just what was in my mind. Only you're wrong on one point. It's the last act of the play, not the first, that will be enacted here tomorrow. The first act was played many years ago, I'm thinking."

"I wonder what part Lee Chow had in that first act?" I said, and stopped aghast, for I had not meant even to skirt the question Dicky had voiced concerning Lillian's possible knowledge of Lee Chow before he had come into our lives.

"His heathen gods only know," she said, "and they certainly aren't going to give him away. But he knows enough, I suspect, to make him the high priest of the ceremonies."

"What is his condition?" I asked. "Will he be in shape to go through with the ordeal?"

Her face clouded. "He'll go through with it," she said, "omitting no tiniest detail of what he considers right and proper. Whether he'll live after he gets through with it is another question. But there's no use trying to swerve him.

"Sometimes I stop and remind myself that, after all, this is my daughter's property that is in question, and that I can forbid his touching it. Then I think what might have happened if he had not touched it before—when that poisoned dart sprang out from the envelope and jabbed his finger—and I will right there.

Only sometimes I wish he'd take the envelopes and their contents and go far away. Marion doesn't need whatever is in there. I don't mean she couldn't use it, but I feel almost as if there were a curse upon it."

"You're morbid," I told her severely. "Remember, Marion's looking forward with a great deal of excitement and joy to this opening. You don't want to be a kill-joy."

"Don't worry!" she retorted. "I'll leave the little old feelings under lock and key by the time Marion arrives. Which reminds me that it ought to be pretty nearly time for Harry to telephone. He took the car into New York to meet the train from Whitney Hall upon which Marion and Carolyn were coming. He was to telephone me the minute the girls joined him."

Illusion of Height

Pleats in Center Panels

By MARIAN MARTIN
PATTERN 9664

Just common sense—this suggestion of your Fashion Counselor, Marian Martin, that up-and-down lines give an illusion of height.

So weep no more if the yardstick shows you a bit below average, the scales—a bit overweight. (Be a frock such as pattern 9664 is designed to "dress off" extra pounds, and do things in the way of increasing stature.

Yet the effect's not a bit too severe, for scalloped shoulder tabs and sleeves and decorative ric-rac braid provide just enough interest and variety.

Pattern 9664 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 16 requires 3⅝ yards 39 inch fabric.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern.

The new Marian Martin pattern book will be ready for mailing Dec. 15. Place your order now, and be among the first to receive a copy.

It's a practical pattern book that interprets Spring's newest fashions in thrifty, easy-to-make clothes for the whole family! Price of book 15 cents. Book and a pattern together, 25 cents.

Health

Caring for Fainting Cases

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Fainting is always alarming to the family and the fear of it is disturbing to the victim.

It is due to some disturbance in the mechanism of the body which diminishes the amount of blood in the brain. This in its turn causes unconsciousness.

There are many causes for faintness and for fainting. It may follow weakness brought about by starvation, excessive exertion, severe bleeding, exposure to intense heat, or to the lack of air. It may follow some emotional disturbance, such as shock, fright or continued anxiety. It is usually associated with some mental reaction or strain.

Certain persons are more susceptible to fainting than others. No doubt you know of someone who faints frequently and on slight provocation. This tendency bears no relation to physical strength; many strong men are thus afflicted.

LEARN SYMPTOMS

It is wise to be familiar with the symptoms which indicate the probability of fainting. Then to observe one in a faint will not cause unnecessary alarm. Knowledge of what to do will prevent injury to the victim.

Persons who faint easily usually know when they are about to have an attack. The room becomes dark and familiar objects are not recognized. A cold perspiration breaks out on the forehead. There is a feeling of nausea or "goneness" in the stomach. Black spots appear before the eyes and the sufferer complains of a feeling of weakness.

It is not difficult to recognize an oncoming fainting spell. The face becomes pale or greenish yellow, and the lips are bluish-red. There are beads of perspiration on the forehead, as I have said. As a rule there is a tendency to yawn. All at once the patient slumps back or falls to the ground unconscious.

CAN PREVENT IT

If the attack is recognized before unconsciousness occurs, it is possible to prevent fainting. This is best accomplished by lowering the head between the knees. Grasp the back of the head firmly and instruct the patient to try to raise the head. As he does so, exert firm pressure on the head. This simple procedure often prevents a fainting attack.

Of course, fainting due to severe loss of blood, or to weakness of the heart, or other organic defect, cannot be prevented by these simple measures. In such a case, the unconscious person should be placed on his back. All tight and constricting clothing should be loosened or removed. Have the head lower than the rest of the body.

Lamb Stew

2 lbs. lamb, breast, shoulder or neck.
Salt.
Pepper.
1 onion, diced, or 6 scallions sliced.
½ cup diced turnips.
1 cup diced potatoes.
3 tbsps. lard.

Preheat casserole to 500 deg. F. Sprinkle flour, 1 tsp. salt and ¼ tsp. pepper on a sheet of oiled paper. Roll fairly small pieces of meat in the mixture. Saute diced onion, remove and saute meat. Add water to cover. Replace onion, cook at 300 deg. for 1½ hours, add vegetables. Cook at 350 deg. for ½ hour, until vegetables are tender. Serves 6 to 8.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

What Do Men Expect Of Girls Today?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We're considered attractive, are in our early twenties, and enjoy parties, dancing and all kinds of sport, but we do not care for drinking or heavy petting, so the young men in our crowd call us "two beautiful blocks of ice," and various other mean names.

What do young men of today expect of girls? It seems if you don't pet and drink you're considered a poor sport, and if you do, you find your way to the trash pile eventually. It's sure hard picking.

BLONDIE AND BROWNIE.

The trouble is, my dear girls, you have met only a cheap type of young men—the kind who expect a girl to be utterly reckless and go the limit for a few poor quality drinks and a ham sandwich. You wouldn't want to marry such poor specimens, even if they asked you. Why waste anything as precious as fleeting youth on them? Try to become acquainted with young men of a better class.

HIS ILLNESS SERIOUS; SHALL HE BREAK ENGAGEMENT?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Perhaps it was because I skimped too much on food and comforts in order to put aside a nest-egg of $1000 before I married the girl I loved, She did not insist on this provision, but her father did, so I had a little cubby-hole of a room, lighted only from a skylight, and for my breakfast I often had nothing but a box of crackers and dinner would be a bowl of soup or a bottle of buttermilk. The result is that I find myself ill with tuberculosis.

It seems there was not enough air in the room lighted by the skylight, and that, more than the poor food, caused the disease. I'm telling these things because it may keep some poor wretch from making a similar mistake.

My girl is broken-hearted and says she will wait for me to get better, but I think the honorable thing would be to break the engagement, don't you? Friends have arranged for me to go to a sanitarium next week. Your answer. Could these things be done as well at home?

GEORGE.

Pretty tough, but please don't despair, as cheerfulness is a large factor in the recovery from T. B. I'm glad you're going to a sanitarium, where absolute rest, sunshine and the proper food will all help to restore you to health. These things can, of course, be arranged at home, but it is much better to have them done on schedule by nurses who are experts in the treatment of this disease.

While you're in the sanitarium do not let your mind dwell on your troubles. Read amusing books, work out puzzles and have your friends write to you. So much depends on cheerfulness.

THEY'VE GONE TOGETHER, BUT NOT EXACTLY "STEADY"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We've been going together for a year or more, but not exactly "steady." Still he gets raving mad if I go out with any other young men. At the same time this law doesn't hold good for him, and he goes out repeatedly with other girls.

We quarrel about this frequently. Every time we go out with our crowd and I dance with other boys and he dances with other girls we fight, but when we go out when we go out alone it's swell. He says he loves me, but I don't think he has proven it. What do you think about it?

PUZZLED.

Since you are not engaged and do not even claim to go "steady," you are certainly at liberty, by all the rules of the game, to go out with and dance with whom you please. If the young man shows temper when you go with someone else, and yet reserves the privilege for himself, he is certainly a poor sport.

Quote to him that age-old maxim that "sauce for the gander is also sauce for the goose."

Dating Another Girl

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

At a party the other night my "steady" met a girl whom he seemed to fall for immediately, and though we have been engaged since June, I felt obliged to ask him if he had made a date with her. He admitted he had, but said he wasn't going to tell me about it unless I asked.

He asked my permission for the date, and also said if he had to give me up on account of the girl, he wouldn't go out with her. I'd like a word from you how to act under the circumstances.

B. W.

Better be a good sport about the whole affair and not object to the date. It's never wise to be too possessive about husbands and lovers. Naturally you would feel a little jealous about this girl, but it's wiser not to show it.

"Meet an Editor!"

BY NELL BRINKLEY

WHO IS the pretty lady with the earnest look and the littered desk? She is a Woman's Page Editor. And she IS very earnest, and she HAS a full desk.

If you thought the woman who manages the Woman's Page you so eagerly peruse—in your small town, or your big one—might be some eccentric oddity, might even be a man, you are perfectly mistaken.

The Cookery Page—oh yes, that's a man nine times out of ten. You guess it if you are cynical. But not the editor of the Woman's Page, the Page that woman turn to after the scares and thrills of the front page are skimmed; and not a few MEN. I have caught them at it. And no wonder.

For the lady who edits it, is—I'll tell you!

If you should ride home some night on the bus beside a pretty lady with fine eyes, and an earnest and sincere face, with soft hair done in the latest, clothed in aristocratic dark blue or black, clutching perhaps a bag of knitting to hypnotize her busy mind into a state of unthinkingness, and, in a case, all that she can carry of the day's mail from troubled strangers, which she faithfully answers for her "home work," and over which she worries not a little—then you may know that perhaps THIS is the editor of the WOMAN'S PAGE!

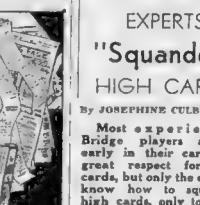
When EXPERTS "Squander" HIGH CARDS

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Most experienced Bridge players acquire early in their careers a great respect for high cards, but only the experts know how to squander high cards, only to come up triumphantly with a winning position which could have been secured in no other way.

Siegfried Klausner of Vienna demonstrates beautifully in today's hand that they know as much in this department of the game abroad as is known in this country.

South, Dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
6 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the King of diamonds and Mr. Klausner, sitting South, won with the Ace. It was evident that there were two lines of play for the contract, a reversal of the dummy and a complete crossruff (involving, perhaps, a heart finesse at some stage or other).

No such risky play as the heart finesse would be necessary, however, if the clubs broke naturally, since then the dummy could be established as the master hand.

Mr. Klausner properly reserved choice by playing for the clubs before drawing trumps. The low club was led to the Ace and a club return ruffed with the Queen (the point of which will appear later). Assured of a club break, the next step was to cash the Ace of trumps, on which both opponents followed.

Disdaining to attempt to drop the outstanding trumps, Mr. Klausner led the trump deuce. By this means dummy was assured of two trump entries, one by ruffing and the other by force.

Both were needed to establish and run the clubs. The explanation of the high ruff at trick three was that even with a good club split, it was still necessary to preserve the low trumps in the South hand in order to be able to force entry to dummy's trumps.

Examination of all four hands discloses the fact that the Jack would have dropped on three straight leads of the master trumps.

And certainly no line of play could be expected to succeed were all four trumps massed in one hand.

Yet in face of the knowledge that the Jack would drop if the hand were to be made, Mr. Klausner properly conceded the trump trick.

Beeckman ON GOOD Manners

By MRS. BEECKMAN

ANNOUNCING THE MARRIAGE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a couple are being married, is it improper for the boy's parents to announce the marriage, as the girl's parents are doing?

Should his parents send announcements to his friends, or should her parents send them to his friends? Can two people, sixteen years of age, act as bridesmaid and best man?

P.

The wedding invitations and the wedding announcements are sent in the name of the mother and father of the bride. The mother and father of the groom do not send out invitations or announcements.

The girl and her mother obtain from the groom a mother the list of the names and addresses of his relatives and friends to whom invitations are to be sent, and the list to whom announcements are to be sent.

These lists are incorporated with the lists of the bride's relatives and friends, and the bride's family send out these invitations and announcements with their own.

Sixteen is fairly young for these important attendants, but it isn't incorrect by any means to have such young attendants, if this is agreeable to everyone concerned.

WHY NOT A TEA?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for me to give my daughter, who is to be married very soon, a bridal answer? I have a number of friends I would like to invite as they will not be invited to her other showers.

MOTHER.

I'm never enthusiastic about the giving of a bridal shower by the bride's mother or the groom's mother or any other close relative of the bride or groom. It always, it seems to me, gives the appearance of being a "promotion" for gifts . . . and it usually is just this.

Why not have a tea party, and invite these friends of yours to a tea in honor of your daughter? This compliments your daughter, and doesn't bring in this moot question of suggesting gifts.

SOUP SPOON

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

A friend of mine declares that it is proper to leave the soup spoon in the bowl, even when there —is a serving plate under the bowl. I claim that the spoon should be placed on the serving plate when diner is through eating. Who is correct?

J.

You are correct. When soup is served in a cup or bowl that is accompanied by an under-plate—such as a bouillon cup or a cream soup cup, or one of the individual covered china or pottery bowls such as are used for onion soup and the like—the spoon is placed on the under-plate when we have finished eating the soup.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

Beauty Questions And Answers

Question: I am very much interested in the salt rubs which you mentioned in your column recently. You also mentioned a salt facial, used, I believe, by Jean Blondell. I would appreciate your printing the recipes of both in your column. My skin is sluggish and my circulation poor, and I think that these rubs are just what I need.

MRS. ALICE F., Lawrence.

Answer: I am very sorry that I cannot publish the salt rub and the facials in this column, as [illegible] of space prevents. However, if you care to send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to this department I will be glad to mail you this special leaflet. You will find that there is nothing better than a salt rub to achieve a healthy, glowing, glad-to-be-alive look

Question: I was very much interested in the sulphur lotion for skin blemishes which you mentioned in your column last week. I have a number of acid spots which come out on my face at intervals and would be very grateful to know of some preparation that would cure them up.

MRS. F. D. F., Boston.

Answer: Sorry, trades names are never mentioned in this column. If you wish write to me again and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope and I will be very glad to give you the name of the lotion and the store where it is sold exclusively in Boston.

It really does wonders in restoring skin radiance and clearness.

"You Have Tenderness . . . Courage . . . and the Daring to Reveal Experiences . . ."
—Says Brockton Woman

Mrs. Ruth Hayden, 26 Cottage st., Brockton, writes:

Dear Elsie.

I have written several letters in appreciation of you, but found I could not write to you without being sentimental to quite a degree, and felt that therefore they would fail to impress you.

Let me say now, with all the restraint I can command, that you are very dear and very real to me, that you occupy an important place in my life—because I first read your articles when I needed the sympathetic understanding of one who dared to reveal that her experiences were not so different from mine, after all.

You have the tenderness, courage, depth of feeling, and sympathetic understanding which go to make a real woman; and you love nature—what more could one have?

MACHINERY TAX SLASH CALLED ESSENTIAL

Philip Nichols, Boston attorney and chairman of the Massachusetts Chamber of Commerce taxation committee, today analyzes for the Boston Evening American the recent recommendations of the special legislative commission to raise $17,000,000 in added state taxes.

Today's article is the first of three in which Attorney Nichols takes the committee recommendations and points out the faults that would accrue in the event of their adoption by the Legislature.

By PHILIP NICHOLS

The commission reports that it does not recommend the adoption of the sales tax "because of the unsatisfactory experences with this tax in many states."

The sales tax is undoubtedly an undesirable form of taxation as a permanent measure, because of its regressive features, but it is not true that as an emergency measure it has proved unsatisfactory in other states, except in states such as New Jersey, which have a considerable proportion of their population living near and doing business in large cities just across the border in other states.

If it proves that substantial additional revenues are absolutely necessary, probably the sales tax is the most promising available method for raising them.

Machinery used in manufacture has not only been taxed in Massachusetts on the full local rate, but has been assessed at its full value, and often at more than its full value.

There can be no question that such machinery is taxed much more heavily in Massachusetts than in most if not all other states in active competition with Massachusetts.

DROVE INDUSTRY AWAY

In some of such states machinery is wholly exempt by law; in others by universal practice it is assessed at but a small percentage of its value.

This discriminatory burden upon Massachusetts industries has no doubt contributed very largely to the several and abandonment of factories and mills in this commonwealth in recent years and a mitigation at least of the discrimination is a vital necessity if our remaining industries are to survive.

A question arises whether under the "proportional" clause of the constitution of Massachusetts, machinery can be constitutionally exempted from all taxation, direct or indirect.

Inclusion of the value of machinery in the base of the corporation excise tax, at $5 per thousand, coupled with exemption from direct taxation would, however, relieve the situation considerably and would undoubtedly meet all constitutional objections.

This suggestion of the Commissioner necessarily brings up the much debated question whether the constitutional requirement of proportionality should n t be repealed, or at least modified, as has been done in some of the more forward looking states with respect to their synonymous "conformity" clause.

TRIBUTE TO COURAGE

The proposal to lower the exemptions in the case of the tax on earned incomes, made by a Commission the majority of the members of which are legislators elected by the people, is a tribute to the courage of those members.

It is also an admission from an unexpected source of what persons familiar with taxation problems have known for some time, namely, that we have not enough millionaires, and the millionaires we have are not wealthy enough, to support the federal, state and municipal governments alone and unaided, even if we confiscated all of their income above bare living expenses and compelled them to keep on earning at the same rate as before.

The wealthy taxpayer has been assessed to the point of diminishing returns; the only two alternatives left are either to reduce public expenditures or else to "soak the poor." As the first alternative seems unthinkable to those in public office, the second is resorted to.

MORAL EFFECT

Perhaps he moral effect of a reduction in the level of income tax exemptions upon the attitude of a large group of voters toward increasing and unnecessary public expenditures is worth the price, especially when this proposal, if adopted, would not increase the tax of any one person more than $9 in any event.

But no increase in taxation on incomes or other sources should be considered apart from the possibility of limiting the tax on real estate, to be discussed later.

(In tomorrow's editions the Boston Evening American will print another installment of the analysis of the legislative commission's report by Mr. Nichols)

Governor Race Last for Haigis

Pittsfield, Dec. 10—John W. Haigis, former state treasurer, and defeated candidate for lieutenant-governor in the last campaign, declared he sought the Republican nomination for governor in order to restore the office to its previous place. If he did not get the nomination, he said he would retire from public life.

Mad Dog Bites 7 in Two Towns

Seven persons were bitten by a white Eskimo spitz dog and are under treatment in Lawrence and Methuen it was disclosed today.

The State Board of Health reported that examination of the dog had shown it afflicted with rabies.

Dr. William W. Hartwell of Washington street, Malden, owner of the animal, was notified of the finding of the board and with four other members of his household was ordered to take Pasteur treatment because of having been exposed to the disease.

The dog became ill in the Hartwell home several days ago and soon afterward disappeared.

The next day in Lawrence the animal bit Robert Conrad of Holly street, Frederick Best of Pearl street, John Regan, Salem street, Andrew Rinberg, May street, and Mary Fowle of Spring street.

The dog was killed by police and the head sent to the State Board for examination. All victims were notified today to submit to the Pasteur treatment.

Helping Mothers to Cut Down On Family's Colds

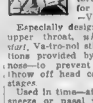
SOON CLEARS "STUFFY HEAD"



Mothers are so often worried about their families' colds that they find special comfort in this unique aid for preventing colds —Vicks Va-tro-nol.

Especially designed for nose and upper throat, where most colds start, Va-tro-nol stimulates the functions provided by Nature—in the nose—to prevent colds, and to throw off head colds in the early stages.

Used in time—at the first sniffle, sneeze or nasal irritation—just a few drops up each nostril—Va-tro-nol helps to avoid many colds.

Where irritation has led to a clogged-up nose (a stuffy head cold or nasal catarrh) Va-tro-nol spreads through the nasal passages—reduces swollen membranes—clears clogging mucus—brings comforting relief.

A Practical Guide for Mothers

Each year, more and more families are being helped to fewer colds, shorter colds and milder colds by following Vicks Plan for Better Control of Colds. Vicks Plan has been clinically tested by practicing physicians, and further proved in everyday home use throughout the country. Full details of the Plan come in each package of Vicks Va-tro-nol.

CHILDREN SEE SANTA FOR 5C.

The Boston & Maine Railroad's Kee Santa for a Nickel Week," during which, from December 15 to 21, children over five and under 12 years of age accompanied by an adult, may ride between any two stations on that road in New England for a round-trip fare of five cents will definitely be effective, it was made known today.

The nickel round trips are good between any two points on Boston & Maine lines within New England so that the children may journey to any one of a score or more important shopping centers where Santa Claus is holding forth.

The only restriction is that the five-cent round-trip fares will not be good on the streamlined "Flying Yankee"

Court May See Bawdy Film

Staid Middlesex probate court may be turned into a cinema for the showing of an allegedly bawdy film in evidence if Judge John C. Leggat permits.

The proposed show is in connection with the petition of Mrs. Marie Curtis of Back Bay for separate support from Lewis F. Curtis of Commonwealth avenue.

"Did you ever see this film?" he asked.

"I may have," Curtis answered.

Judge Green then asked him if it hadn't been shown in his house one night.

"It was just put on because some of the guests wanted it," Curtis replied.

"No. The women were there for about two hours, walking in and out," the witness answered.

Curtis then admitted that he had several films at home to entertain men. He denied he owned them, however, declaring he had borrowed them from a friend.

During a recess, Judge Green said in the corridor that if the court would let him, he would exhibit the films.

Slain Liggett's Widow Reveals Kidnap Threats

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 10 (INS).—Investigation of the murder of Walter W. Liggett, crusading weekly newspaper editor and author of the "Bawdy Boston" expose, who was shot to death in typical gangland fashion here, disclosed today that threats had recently been made to kidnap his two children.

The threats were made during the trial of Liggett on a statutory charge involving a 16-year-old Austin, Minn., girl. Liggett was acquitted and charged the case against him was framed and engineered by his bitter political enemy, Governor Floyd B. Olson.

The kidnap threats were made by an unidentified speaker over the telephone, Mrs. Liggett, widow of the slain editor, said today. The threats were directed against her children, Wallace, 12, and Marda, 10. Marda was with her mother when an assassin last night leaned from an automobile and murdered Liggett as he stood beside his wife and daughter.

GUARDED CHILDREN

"Each time the party threatened us and said if we did not look out something would happen to our children," Mrs. Liggett said.

As a result the two children were kept out of school for a time.

The Mid-West American, Liggett's paper, constantly attacked the police administration in Minneapolis and Gov. Olson. In the last issue of the paper Liggett forecast his death, predicting he would be assassinated. Two months ago he was set upon by men in a beer parlor and severely beaten.

A complete file "of conclusive evidence," of asserted political links between the underworld and Minneapolis city and police authorities, the Hennepin county attorney's office and Governor Olson is "safely secreted in the East and will be made public," Mrs. Liggett declared today.

GIVES POLICE CLUE

Mrs. Liggett, recovered from the shock, was closeted with police for several hours today. She was reported to have given them information identifying Isadore Blumenfield, alias Kid Cann, as one of the killers. Cann, who surrendered to police shortly after the slaying claiming an alibi, was held without charge.

The widow revealed that Liggett had planned to distribute at today's session of the Legislature copies of his paper demanding impeachment of the Governor on 10 charges, which he had for many weeks published in heavy, bold type in his newspaper.

Gov. Olson offered the services of the State bureau of criminal apprehension in rounding up Liggett's slayers.

HIS BOSTON "EXPOSE"

In 1930 Liggett became an editor of "Plain Talk," the magazine in which he now famous "Bawdy Boston" appeared.

Boston and the entire Commonwealth were startled by the charges in the article that corruption of police and politicians in the illicit liquor trade was rampant and that white slavery and dope peddling also existed widely here.

At its conclusion the jury reported that investigation of the activities of some members of Boston's police department should be made by a proper tribunal.

The jury found insufficient evidence to justify returning indictments.

FEDERAL BANK EVIDENCE IN

Submission of evidence by the plaintiff in the $3,200,000 suits brought by four trust companies against the receiver of the closed Federal Bank before Arthur Black, sitting as master in United States court, is expected to close late today.

It has taken 108 days to put in this evidence given by fiduciary officials of the closed bank and other witnesses. A total of 1026 exhibits has been introduced.

Following a recess of six weeks the defense will open. About 50 witnesses will be heard.

The four trust companies involved in the suits are the Bancroft Company of Worcester, Brockton Trust Company, Inman Trust Company of Cambridge and the Salem Trust Company, all subsidiaries of the Federal National Bank.

BUTLER IS GUEST

Servant Invited as "Old Friend"

New York, Dec. 10 (US)—The upper strata of society's "400" was agog today over the choice bit of gossip that Mrs. Kiliaen Van Rensselaer had entertained the family butler as an honored guest at the coming out party for her debutante daughter Miss Lorraine Graves, at the Colony Club.

But the socially prominent matron stood her ground and vehemently denied that Raymond is a "butler." No, a thousand times no. He is, she insisted, "an old family retainer." She explained:

"Raymond is a gentleman and knows how to conduct himself perfectly. When my daughter was a baby he bounced her on his knee. He knows the family and we are very fond of him. He could not get in as a servant so I invited him as a friend."

So that's that.

There are No Safer Brakes Made

—than the Super-Safety Brakes on the 1936 Ford V-8—

No other car in America has the same basic design as the Ford V-8. And because of its unique design—the Ford car could use any type of braking system now in common use.

BUT, with the whole field to choose from, Ford stands by mechanically-operated Super-Safety brakes as safest for the Ford V-8.

This is the type braking system on many of America's costliest cars and most racing cars. And with its unique chassis design, Ford can use this system to better effect than any other automobile built today.

Then, Ford has more effective braking surface (186 square inches) than is found in any other low-priced car. And big, 12" alloy-iron drums with special cooling fins to give you maximum braking power under all road conditions.

All in all, no safer brakes are made than you get in the 1936 Ford V-8.

And right through this Ford V-8 is the same sound engineering for safety and comfort. Ford uses a one-piece, welded-steel body because it is safer and quieter. Ford gives you Safety Glass in every window at no extra cost because Ford believes it is the manufacturer's duty to provide for maximum safety as part of the car's sales price.

Drive the Ford V-8. See how it "holds the road" on curves—how dependably the brakes work on rough roads, steep hills, or anywhere else. Get in touch with—

FORD PERMANENT WHEELBASE

Radius rods [1] brace the front axle—like a pair of giant arms . . . Radius rods and Torque-tube [2] give triple bracing to the rear axle. This construction means that the front and rear axles of a Ford car are held always equidistant—always in perfect aligment. Or this permanent wheelbase any braking system now in common use could be used, and only with this Ford-type wheelbase can mechanical, Super-Safety brakes be used to the fullest advantage.

FOUR INDEPENDENT BRAKE RODS

Note the four brake rods [3] of strong, tempered steel. These rods link the pressure of your foot on the pedal with the four big brake-drums on the wheels. They do this job positively, surely, under all road conditions. Note especially that no one Ford brake has to depend on the other three. Failure of one (practically impossible) would leave three perfectly-operating brakes.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

Somehow the news that Mr. Cornelius Cronin is shutting up the last horse-shoeing and blacksmithing shop in downtown Boston has set me to remembering things. With an added fillip to the memory from a book I was reading yesterday, "Edna His Wife" (Houghton Mifflin), by that charming story teller, Margaret Ayer Barnes. It was early in the story that the plump little heroine went out buggy-riding on a Sunday afternoon with her smart Chicago lawyer and was proposed to just as a prairie thunderstorm broke. Thick August dust on the roadside weeds and the clop-clop-clop of a tired horse.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

What you don't know you don't miss, and I suppose that there are few modern children who have ever wanted to drive a horse, provided even the second-handedest car were available. But I feel a little sorry for them, just the same. After all you can't feed an automobile lumps of sugar or half of an apple. Pouring alcohol into the radiator hardly gives you the same sensation. And an auto's nose isn't as velvety and sensitive and responsive.

Thoroughbreds One Thing, Truck Horses Quite Another

On the other hand, I suppose that everybody—except perhaps Mr. Cronin—is glad to learn that the trucking business has decided to do without horses. A couple of thoroughbreds drawing a light carriage on a Sunday afternoon is one thing. A couple of old horses straining to drag a heavy laden truck up the frosty cobbles of a Worcester hill is quite another. I'll be glad when all the old truck horses are turned out to grass.

But it was nice, when you were about 10 years old, to go out driving with Mother, with Molly the chestnut mare harnessed to the Goddard, the covered buggy. What was known to you as the "bullyvard" was never crowded of a morning and sometimes you could drive the elderly and patient beast, who was respected only by Mother.

Sunday afternoon was a different matter. There were always things you liked to do better than go for a long afternoon's drive, en famille, ont through the farm roads, now fashionable suburbs, in the open victoria, with Dick the fat and lazy gray, even then on the eve of retirement and pasture.

Boys Nowadays Miss Fun of Riding to Stable

And small boys nowadays can't ride the motive power from the factory to the barn. Mr. Goodwin would make plenty trouble if he knew it. Even if your Father would let you—which he wouldn't at the age of 10. But in those days you would wait until the delivery teams drove in at twilight and tease one of the men to put you up on one of the big boy animals.

Feeling very small you would straddle it, hanging on for dear life to the two brass-looking horns or spikes that jutted up from the shoulder pad, or whatever it was called, and go cloppety-cloppety across the trolley tracks and up the hill where, just as you had reached the limit of your endurance in hanging on, you would fall off thankfully into a stableman's arms.

Birth Rate of Horse Going Up in the West

There seems to be a silver lining to this cloud. The newspapers tell us that out West the birth rate of horses is going up—and the price also. In these last six years a good many automobiles have degenerated sufficiently to be no good to themselves or anyone else, and the noble farmer, even with all the financial aid the government is giving him, has discovered that a horse costs less than a car and causes fewer garage bills and consumes practically no gasoline and is really quite adequate for work on the farm, because it can eat the produce and keep going—which is more than you can say for even a second-hand automobile.

If the gasoline gets any higher hereabouts we may yet be seeing Percherons hauling the Boston trucks and the horse-shoeing business coming back with what literary people call "a vengeance." This happy event will probably not take place in time to save Mr. Cornelius Cronin's horse-shoeing business, but, at that, maybe our offspring will not be entirely deprived of experiences with that noble quadruped—the horse.

Boy Bead Victim Better

WIND PIPE CLEARED

Paul, who is 3½ and lives in South Athol, almost died when a bead he swallowed lodged in his wind pipe.

A combination of skill and daring on the part of the boy's father, Harry, saved Paul's life when the bead was discovered.

Harry, with Paul wrapped warmly in blankets, followed a state police escort over the city roads at breakneck speed to bring the boy to the hospital here.

Paul was playing with a string of beads when he swallowed one of them and began coughing incessantly.

Becoming alarmed, his father and mother rushed him to a doctor in Gardner. The trip to Boston was advised, and off they went.

QUODDY FUNDS PLEA DENIED

Washington, Dec. 10 (AP)—Army engineers said today they had made no request for additional funds to speed work on the Passamaquoddy Bay tidal project during the winter.

The statement was made after Public Works Administrator Ickes asked about reports published in Maine that an additional $7,000,000 would be allocated, replied:

"That is in the hands of the War Department."

Reports have been heard in the capital that the additional allocation, asked recently by Governor Brann, had been tentatively approved

OPENS POTATO WAR

Woman Defies Jail Threat

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Potato growing on a large scale, in defiance of the administration control act, will be the order in New England if the expressed determination of Mrs. Paul FitzSimons, Republican national committee woman of Rhode Island, is emulated.

In a speech before the Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts on Beacon street, Mrs. FitzSimons flayed the "Moscow inspired" advisers of the President, implored the people to remove themselves from their indifference and realize that the Roosevelt policies are leading to "outright Socialism," and termed the Potato Control Act the "latest insanity" of the Raw Deal.

INVITED TO JAIL

"I am here to invite you to come and visit me in jail," Mrs. FitzSimons declared, departing from a prepared address.

"At Newport and at our place in New Hampshire next summer we are going to raise potatoes that we shall see to it that more are planted than the law allows, I defy anyone to put me in jail."

It was "Rhode Island Night" at the club, Congressman Charles F. Risk, who won the recent special election in that state and greatly heartened the budding Republican opposition to the Raw Deal, was there. Also, Mrs. Albion White, president of the Daughters of Rhode Island.

Local speakers were State Senator William H. McSweeney of Salem and Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird of Walpole.

RAPPED AS FAILURE

Congressman Risk denounced the Roosevelt administration as a failure. Its methods since 1933, he declared, have been "abhorrent to liberty-loving Americans."

"If the situation were not so serious," he continued, "we could sit down and laugh at some of the things it has done."

He characterized the Congress as "supine" and ridiculed the passing of the bill calling for the expenditure of five billions after a debate lasting but three hours at the administration's dictation.

AT BECK AND CALL

"Without Civil Service of any kind, 200,000 employes have been added to the government payrolls," he stressed. "If these were Civil Service people they would not be allowed to take part in politics. They are not, and we shall see what a vast army of political workers will be at the beck and call of the administration to hold its power for another four years."

Mrs. FitzSimons, at one point in her address, charged that "Communism has permeated into the kindergartens."

1000 Win Jobs On Library

More than 1000 white collar workers, mostly women, had assurance today of work for at least 10 months as a result of Presidential approval given to the WPA project at the Boston Public Library.

Total cost of the project is estimated at $586,858, of which the federal government will supply $923,000 for wages.

This machine, second car involved in a three-car crash on Lexington street, Waltham, plunged over an embankment, injuring two of its occupants, Lewis Hamel, 34, of Portland, Me., and Emerson street, Newton, and Erlon M. Ryerson, 30, of Cushing street, Waltham.

N. E. INDUSTRY AIDED BY PACT

New England industries will receive considerable benefit through the reciprocal trade agreement between the United States and Canada, effective next January 1

In a survey today, made jointly by the Boston & Maine Railroad, Canadian railroad officials, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and the Boston News Bureau it was indicated that machinery, particularly textile machinery, is one commodity likely to show a large increase in Canadian sales.

Among the largest manufacturers of mill machinery in the world are the Saco-Lowell shops in Lowell and at Saco and Biddeford, Me., and the Crompton & Knowles shop at Worcester.

These companies manufacture mill machinery, types not made in Canada, and on certain kinds of textile machinery not made in Canada the duty reductions run as high as 50 per cent.

Triple Crash Kills Man in Waltham

One man was killed, two others injured in a triple collision of cars in Waltham today, one of several accidents resulting from icy roads.

Walter A. Colson, 63, of Dundee road, Arlington, is dead. He was riding with his brother-in-law, Andrew Johnson, 59, of Waldo road, Arlington, and two other men, when their car skidded and struck another, which in turn hit a third and plunged over an embankment.

Colson was the only one hurt in the car Johnson was driving. He was thrown out on his head and instantly killed.

In the second car were Lewis Hamil, 34, of Portland, Me., and Emerson street, Newton, and Erlon M. Ryerson, 30, of Cushing street, Waltham.

This machine bounced off Johnson's into one driven by Edgar J Keenan of Eddy street, Newton, then rolled over an embankment, trapping Hamil, who kicked out a window to free himself

SHIRLEY TEMPLE WOE

Santa Mustn't Bring Her an Auto

Hollywood, Cal., Dec 10 (AP)—Shirley Temple wants a midget automobile for Christmas, but Santa Claus is going to turn her down

The little film star wrote him today, saying

"Dear Santy Claus, mother says I can ask for a doll carriage, a bicycle, some rainy day games to play with, a painting set and books about animals, as that is what I am supposed to get.

"If you can't get me those things, I would like a midget auto that runs. If they don't make them at the North Pole, I know where you can buy them. I will trade you an autographed picture of me and Ronald Colman for one of yours. Your dear friend, Shirley Temple."

Mrs. George Temple, her mother said Shirley will receive the things she described as "what I am supposed to get."

It will be a few years before she is old enough to drive an automobile, Mr Temple said

Newton Contest Heated

NEEDHAM VS. CHILDS

Six Massachusetts cities went to the polls today to elect municipal officers. In Malden, Lawrence, Newton and Westfield an exceptionally heavy cast of ballots was reported in the first few hours of voting.

In Malden where a registered vote of 25,000 was eligible to be cast, early poll of ballots indicated an 85 per cent total. Here the principal contest lay between Mayor John D. Devir, seeking a 7th term, and Ald. Soren Willesen, chemical manufacturer and retired sea-captain.

The only other city-wide contest was a four-cornered race for two places on the school board headed by Mrs. Cora M. Hammon, the only woman school committee chairman in Massachusetts.

The Rev. Roy Linden Minich, pastor of the First Congregational Church and Thomas J. Kelleher are the other two actual contestants, a fourth candidate being Arthur P. Mulvaney, who withdrew from the race too late to take his name off the ballot.

Heavy Vote

The Lawrence election, where Mayor Walter A. Griffin has been practically conceded re-election, a surprisingly heavy vote was cast in the 6-to-8 a. m. balloting.

The hours coincided with the early morning rush of local leather workers to the factories. Though Robert F. Hancock, Mayor Griffin's opponent was not conceded much chance for victory, interest centered in the contest for public safety commissioner between Thomas F. Galvin opposed for re-election by Henry J. Moore

Out of a total of 36,857 registered voters in Lawrence the largest ever recorded in local elections history, it was expected fully 30,000 would be cast before polls closed at 6 p. m

Particular interest is centered in Newton where former Mayor Edwin O. Childs, emerging from retirement, seeks the mayoralty once again with opposition being furnished by Major General Daniel Needham and Sydney B. Holden.

Drake Quits

A fourth candidate, Paul H. Drake, announced his withdrawal from the contest late last week but not soon enough to have his name removed from the ballot

Former Mayor Childs has never been defeated in an election, while General Needham is making his first bid for elective office.

Observers expect that Holden's vote will shift to Needham as Childs and Needham are extremely even y matched in pre-election calculations.

In Westfield Mayor Raymond H. Cowing is also conceded re-election in the contest which finds Councilman George E. Brady opposing him

Beverly is electing two school committee members, three aldermen-at-large and ward aldermen from each of the city's six wards.

Northampton has contests for assessor, two school committeemen, seven city councilmen and one library trustee.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Marjorie McBride

Daring young men on the flying trapeze of suggestive literature are losing their appeal in Boston. At the Public Library, people no longer ask for the latest in ruthless realism or scorching sensationalism.

MARJORIE McBRIDE

Books most readers clamor for are "Silas Crockett," a novel of Maine by Mary Ellen Chase . . . "Discovery," Admiral Byrd's own story . . . "North to the Orient," by Anne Morrow Lindbergh . . . and "Boston and the Boston Legend" by Lucius Beebe. Attendants find that many women inquire for books on flying, radio and other subjects hitherto monopolized by men, while fat and middle aged gentlemen prefer the sweet boy-and-girl romances built on the Maytime-and-you theme.

In the newspaper room, it is common to see a country-born boy or girl weeping quietly over the home town paper.

In the magazine room, they're playing to capacity houses since cold weather set in. Popular magazines are hard to get hold of half an hour after the doors open.

"Where's the husband all this time?" demanded the interlocutor.

"Oh, he's in the PEN," said the prosperous lady, easily. "But when he gets out, there'll be another society with a lot of letters to it, and a job for him, too. Times is simply grand!"

Right and Wrong Way Of Serving Wines

Even in the seemingly simple matter of pouring wine, there's a right way, and a wrong. If you're having wine over the holidays, you may be interested in the advice of Edward Sears, Federal street connoisseur.

"Grasp the bottle by the label when pouring. In some countries, holding a bottle by the neck is considered not only uncouth but positively hostile. A small sip of wine should be poured into the host's glass first . . . Never full a glass . . . With most wines, it is advisable to pour the glass about two-thirds full. With Bordeaux and Burgundies, one-half full."

BOB HOPE

Comes to Town With the 'Follies'

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Frequently a man's ultimate occupation can be traced to a very definite youthful experience. This is particularly true in the case of Bob Hope.

Boston saw Mr. Hope last season when he played Harry Richman's pal in a musical show.

He will be in again for public display on Christmas night, as featured comedian in the new "Follies" at the Boston Opera House.

The turning point of Bob Hope's life occurred in Cleveland, Ohio, although I am taking it from hearsay and have not consulted the George Holland Sporting Guide.

It happened in a prize ring. The principals were Mr. Hope and one Mr. Rieko, who is known as Johnnie Risko to boxing records, and the "Akron Rubber Man" to boxing addicts. These two met in a ring in Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Hope's ambitions as a prize-fighter were fostered by his natural ability to handle himself in a tussle and his exceptionally good wind.

Round One passed without serious damage to either contestant. Rieko chased Mr. Hope the complete period. Round Two uncovered Mr. Hope's third attribute pugilistically. He could take it!

This painful and bruising episode decided for Mr. Hope that it was much safer to lead with a smart remark than to lead with your chin and then remark that it hurt.

Thus a career was born.

The late Roscoe Arbuckle placed the "Follies" comedian in his act and Bob landed in New York after touring the country with Arbuckle. He signed with "Sidewalks of New York," the Eddie Dowling show. The manager of the Selwyn Theater, Chicago, saw him in this show and engaged him as master of ceremonies.

* * *

Two years of introducing acts and telling stories in Chicago, an engagement in "Ballyhoo," a revue; a long period in vaudeville, and then Bob Hope got his big chance as Buck Haines in "Roberta." The comedian was missing from that elegant operetta when it played in Boston, and Boston has never seen Mr. Hope at his best.

Burgess Meredith Signed For "Winterset" Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Dec. 10—Without doubt Burgess Meredith is the most talked of young actor of the current theatrical season. I have wondered ever since I saw him in "Winterset" why some of the Hollywood producers haven't signed him for his diction is excellent and he has an attractive appearance.

Pandro Berman answers my question by putting young Meredith on a long term contract and here is something. One of his pictures will be "Winterset" by Maxwell Anderson.

Louella O. Parsons

While the play is gloomy and full of grim tragedy, it is beautifully handled on the stage and it should make an unusual picture although it won't be possible to film it before next May. The play is still going strong in New York and Pandro is rumored as having paid a tidy sum for the film rights.

* * *

The age old tradition of the actor that the show must go on was upheld by Rose Alexander whose young wife killed herself a few days ago. The day following the suicide of Mrs. Alexander, Rose, knowing that Warner Brothers needed him in an important scene that called for many extras, astonished everybody by appearing on the set and insisting on going on. When he finishes at Warners he goes to 20th Century-Fox on a loan from Jack Warner to play opposite Rochelle Hudson in "Everybody's Old Man." That is the picture starring Irvin Cobb with Donald Meek and Warren Hymer in the cast.

* * *

Chatter in Hollywood: For two weeks Warner Baxter beat Ronald Colman at tennis. His victory might have been all right if he hadn't told all of their friends who attended Ronnie. So there was nothing to do but get even with Warner and Ronnie did it and how. His introduced two professional tennis players as friends from England and they beat Warner unmercifully. It wasn't until the game was ended Ronnie admitted they were professionals. Who would have suspected the dignified Ronnie of being a practical joker?

The widely discussed battle between Carole Lombard and Universal over "Spinster's Dinner" has been ironed out and the picture goes into production December 15. Carole very wisely refused to make the picture until she approved the script and had a leading man that she felt was suitable for the role. Preston Foster who does such a swell job in "Annie Oakley," is satisfactory to both Carole and Walter Lang, her director. Walter should be well enough by the middle of December to begin work.

Nothing like getting away from one's home town to acquire a new aura. Joan Marsh was around Hollywood for a long time without getting very much of a break. Then she went East, made personal appearances, scored on the radio and is now back after a year's absence with a movie contract. Joseph Bantley has signed her for the leading role in "Dancing Feet," a Republic picture. Ben Lyon, who is the white-haired boy with Nat Levine, has been chosen for Republic's latter picture and will play opposite Miss Marsh.

Snapshots of Hollywood

GERTRUDE MICHAEL'S pet Dachshund killed by a train; GERTRUDE inconsolable for Johannesburg was with her in her automobile accident and escaped unscratched; CONRAD NAGEL cabling that the DORIS KENYON-RAMON NOVARRO play brought forth cheers from the fashionable London audience; DORIS, he says, was beautiful beyond words; CONRAD reaches here in time for Christmas; COUNTESS DI FRASSO entertaining with a small dinner for her niece, MARY TAYLOR, followed by a preview of "Soak the Rich," the HECHT-MacARTHUR picture in which MISS TAYLOR has the lead; BEN HECHT suffering with a bad cold, being advised how to take care of it by CHARLIE, AL JOLSON and RUBY KEELER chewing gum in unison at the fights—round by round; LUPE VELEZ off for Paris; JOHNNY WEISSMULLER due for a lonesome Christmas, but he won't too lonesome to ring-side referee at the Hollywood Stadium. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

At Park

A Friday midnight performance is scheduled

Arliss Is Cast as Tramp

As a lovable vagabond, George Arliss steps out of period pictures, such as "The House of Rothschild" and "The Iron Duke," in "Mister Hobo," the star's latest film, which comes to the Keith Memorial Thursday, with a special preview showing Wednesday night.

The other Keith theater, the Boston, changes program Thursday also, with Edmund Lowe in "The Great Impersonation" and "His Family Tree," starring James Barton.

Mr. Arliss, in tatters, as "Spike," a tramp, is an example of casting away from type that has occasioned much interest. The English star has been seen always in the costume of an estate higher than that of vagabondia.

In "Mister Hobo" he plies the trade of tinker, sleeps in haystacks and enjoys himself quite thoroughly until his scenario promotes him to the ownership of a Paris bank. Irene Gerrard and Viola Keats are prominent in support.

* * *

"The Great Impersonation" brings Edmund Lowe to the Boston screen in a dual role, and the film is an adaptation of E. Phillips Oppenheim's romantic mystery of the same title.

Valeria Hobson and Vera Engels are the leading women. Also featured are Henry Mollison, Spring Bylington, Lumsden Hare, Henry Kolker and Brandon Hurst.

James Barton is reported as extremely funny in "His Family Tree," which is the story of a gentleman from Ireland who comes to America to visit with his son and the son's family. The visitor finds that the son has changed his name and is running for office as the scion of an aristocratic family. The old gentleman starts campaigning for his son, and wins the Irish vote and the election.

Grange Will Meet

Between 1500 and 2000 members of the Massachusetts State Grange are expected to attend the 63d annual convention, which begins today at the Hotel Bradford. The convention continues through Thursday.

Revue Star

Jinx Goes Along On Maine Trip

If the well known jinx stops dogging them long enough, Paul E. Prieper, of Talbot avenue, Dorchester, and Samuel Gaskill, of West Cottage street, Roxbury, will be back home today, but they are not laying any bets on their success.

Last reports from the pair came from Hampton, N. H., where they were slightly disarranged when a taxicab containing them plunged down a 15-foot embankment.

After being treated by a physician, they disclosed a hoodoo trip to Dover-Foxcroft, Maine. They said two men hired them to drive them to that town on the promise of $70. When they arrived, the men disappeared without paying them, and later stole an automobile of Judge H. M. Hayes there.

"Follies" Beauty

For lavish description of an actress, the following — handiwork of Sam Stratton, press-agent for the new Ziegfeld "Follies" — is nominated for the week's trophy

"Florine Callahan, charming as a Boccherini minuet, statuesque as a Northern Michigan pine, and with more curves than the letter S in a Spencerian copybook, etc., etc."

Yes, Miss Callahan has joined the "Follies."

Leominster Seeks Mayor Pay Raise

Leominster, Dec. 10 — A $2000 salary increase for Mayor-elect Harold W. Burdett, chosen at the recent election, will be sought from the Legislature, City Councilor R. Lincoln revealed today. The salary of the present mayor, Sidney E. Bell is $1000 a year.

Strong, Silent Men Outdated

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

President Roosevelt made two speeches yesterday and the Republicans ain't picked out a man to meet him in the Rose Bowl.

"We've past the strong silent stage of politics. The G. O. P. ought to get the kind of fellow we wrote about twenty years ago.

Once he started talking he never stopped. He had been vaccinated with a phonograph needle.

Warns on Election

New Orleans, La., Dec. 10—Representative William J. Granfield of Massachusetts, chairman of the House investigating committee, issued a warning that the "customary election practices" will not be tolerated here on January 21, when primaries are held to determine the fate of the Huey Long regime.

Society's First Families Attend Boys' Club Dinner

By BETTY ALDEN

WHEN THE OFFICERS of the Boys' Club of Boston sent out invitations to the dinner they gave last evening in honor of the 30th anniversary of the founding of the local branch of the Boys' Club of America, they little dreamed that an S. R. O. sign would greet the late comers to the Statler ballroom, and that over 1400 would not only accept, but actually attend the dinner . . . and after a glance at the crowd, which packed the ballroom, one would judge that the invitation list had been pretty well checked and double checked to include only prominent and influential folk . . .

MRS. ALLSTON BOYER

Forrester Clark, Nat Winthrop, Carl Keller and Frederick Church, Jr., are a few of the prominent young men on the board of the club who were foresighted enough to enlist the aid of a committee of women to help them with plans for the dinner . . . Serita Bartlett Winthrop was one of these, looking very lovely in a fluffy gown of black chiffon with tiers of tiny lace ruffles ending in a train, and Mrs. Marshall Fabyan another . . . She wore a dark green dinner gown, brightened by a spray of fuchsia flowers . . . Leslie Bremer was an early arrival and started the evening by tipping her elbow with the Fabyans in the bar . . .

There was lots of merriment at the bar table of the Laurence Lombards, and the William de Ford Beals also had a bit of cheer before going up to dinner . . .

Practically everyone of social prominence was there . . . Cabots, Lawrences, Carters, Winthrops, Hallowells . . . all the old Back Bay names were on the list . . . and a great many young people considered this one of the notable events of the winter season and attended in large parties . . .

Dodo Dean wore a brilliant dress of flame taffeta . . . Emily Davis wore black with a small velvet hat . . . The young Kidders were there and the Henry McBurney Parkers . . . Ada Trafford Mason and her bridegroom . . . Ada wore a pretty shirred dress of brilliant green with a long black wrap . . . Mrs. Richard Sears, Jr.'s, red hair gleamed over her gown of emerald green as she held court in the lobby greeting many friends to whom she is "Reeka" . . . The Charlie Devens seemed to be getting a kick out of being there, as did Rosamond Lockwood, the junior Moses Williamses, Mrs. Frederick Winthrop, Jr., in a flame tunic dress; Mr. and Mrs. Bill Ellison, Mr. and Mrs. John Yerxa, an especially attractive young couple . . . Mrs. Yerxa wore black with long sleeves, and a fine lacy yoke of eggshell color with cuffs to match and silver slippers . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Watson, the latter in bottle green with a pretty dusty pink wrap; Mr. and Mrs. Harcourt Amory, the Eben S. Draspers, Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Paxon, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cushman, Mrs. Robert Gray Dodge, in powder blue velvet, accompanied by Mr. Dodge; Mr. Amory Coolidge, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel de Menocal, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Mixter, Mr. and Mrs. Halfdan Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Lapham, the R. W. Laphams, Mrs. George Mumford, and many others were in the throng . . .

Newlyweds to Live in New York

ELEANOR ROWE'S marriage to Gerry Cassedy on Friday gives us the clue as to why she has been working in New York when she has a perfectly devoted family here in Brookline and always seemed to have plenty of escorts at her beck and call . . . Their romance, it seems, dates back to Gerry's college days at Harvard, and after he went to New York to earn his living Eleanor followed to seek a job for herself . . . After her experience in the work-a-day world, a large society wedding seemed like folly to Eleanor so she and Gerry marched up to the Church of the Transfiguration in New York and were wed . . . Henry Rowe, the bride's brother, was the only attendant . . .

The newlyweds will live in Sutton place, New York . . . Mrs. Cassedy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Prescott Rowe of Brookline . . .

If the manifold activities of that most unusual family, the Braggiottis, have ever intrigued you, you will be interested in Isidore Braggiotti's memoirs, which are running in serial form in Town and Country . . . the first instalment, which begins in this month's issue, promises a very enlightening and colorful story of this talented American family, whose members were born under the flags of five nations . . .

Richard Chutes Visited by Stork

THE LITTLE STORK, who has been flying over a great many socially prominent roof tops lately, left a baby girl yesterday for Dr. and Mrs. Richard Chute of Marlborough street . . . Mrs. Chute is the former Ruth Sears, daughter of Dr. George C. Sears of Beacon street, and if her daughter takes after her she will certainly be dubbed "Carrot Top" or "Ginger" when she goes to school . . .

Another household which will soon be echoing with infant gurgles and cries is that of the Alston Boyers of New York . . . Mrs. Boyer is the former Charlotte Young of Weston, who went to New York several years ago to seek a job and in no time was posing for ads in the most high-tone magazines . . . In no time, also, she fell in love with Allston, son of a prominent and wealthy Long Island family, and came home to have her wedding in Weston . . .

A notation in the log of the Yankee, globe-circling schooner of Captain and Mrs. Irving Johnson of Gloucester and Springfield, reads . . . December 5, 1935, in port at Springfield at seven bells morning watch, new seaman signed on . . . Name, Arthur Cook Johnson . . . Description, 6½ pounds, ruddy complexion . . . Signed, Captain and Mrs. Irving Johnson . . .

When this young lad is nine months old he will begin his sailing career as a passenger on another round-the-world trip with his parents and their crew of socially prominent adventurers of New England and New York . . . His mother is the former Electa Search of Rochester, New York, formerly a leading figure in Rochester social circles . . .

WILL MODEL At Cushman Fashion Show

"GINNY" PHELAN, popular daughter of Mrs. James J. Phelan of Brookline, pauses to look over the library at the Charlotte Cushman Club while waiting for the others to arrive to try on the dresses they are going to model in the Cushman Club's fashion show this coming Friday.

Hospital Tea Friday

Mrs. Richard Saltonstall, president and the members of the ladies board of the Free Hospital for Women will act as hostesses when the hospital is opened to the public Friday afternoon from 2.30 until 4.30.

This open house is part of the "Come and See—Go and Tell" week program of the Women's Crusade of the Community Federation of Boston, which enabled those interested in the various charitable agencies aided by the federation, to visit and see for themselves the work done in the agencies.

Members of the board who are planning to attend and hung guests are Mrs. Harold Pitman, Mrs. Joseph F. Woods, Mrs. Charles Fanning Ayer, Miss Martha Alford, Mrs. F. William Marlow, Mrs. Richard C. Paine, Mrs. John P. Cotton, Mrs. Marland C. Hobbs, Miss Elizabeth Stackpole, Mrs. Hobart Ames and Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs.

Society Notes

MR. JAMES ROOSEVELT, son of the President, who has been visiting Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy in Palm Beach, Florida, departed for the north last Saturday evening . . .

Ceremony In West Newton

MR. AND MRS. ALFRED BLANCHARD KERSHAW of Temple street, West Newton, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Elizabeth Gore Kershaw, to William Alfred Hoyt Butler.

The ceremony will be held in the First Unitarian Church in West Newton on Saturday evening, December 28, and will be followed by an informal reception. The Rev. Herbert Hitchen will perform the ceremony.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Kibbee of New York, formerly of West Newton, will be the maid of honor and only attendant and Edward Hood Bonelli of Boston will be the best man. The usher list is to be announced in a few days.

After the New Year, Mr. Butler and his bride who attended Radcliffe College, will be at home on Beacon Hill.

Aristos Club Plans Fete

League House will be gay with wreaths, candles and trees for the Aristos Club Christmas party, Thursday night. Santa Claus will make an early visit bringin grabs for each member and an outstanding program of entertainment will feature Dolores Newman, Alice Clem, Manola Simpson and Billie Millar. Kas Erwin is directing a one-act play and will be assisted by her fellow students at Mary Frances Rooney School of Elocution.

Another novelty in the club calendar is the series of "telephone bridges" which members are having at their home early in the new year. Mildred Collins and Ada Moriarty are sponsoring the first of the group, which aids the scholarship fund.

Thursday evening's affair will also be a reception to new club members and to new aides of the executive board. Tea will be served by Carol Murnane, club president, Miss O'Donnell and Veronica O'Neill.

Assistingt on the reception committee are Arline Girard, Grace Donahue, Mary O'Neill, May Doughty, Helen Dwyer, Frances McKenzie, Sadie Kelly and Ruth Connell.

Husbands' Night

Bellarmine Academy Entertains

By MARGUERITE DOWNEY

BELLARMINE ACADEMY departed from its usual routine of Wednesday morning talks to entertain members' husbands at a lecture last night at the Commonwealth Country Club.

Rev Louis Sullivan's lecture on "Philosophies-Old and New" was the highlight. In a fascinating, dynamic manner he discussed the various schools of modern philosophic thought.

Mrs. Joseph H. Shortell of Newton, who formed the group two seasons ago for educational mission purposes, was chairman of the evening. She wore a corsage of gardenias with her black lace frock.

Black Velvet

Alice Elizabeth Barry of Jamaica Plain was on hand . . effectively doing her secretary duties in black velvet. Mrs. Edward Walsh put in an equally busy night greeting friends and arranging chairs. Her dinner frock was fashioned of black crepe and net.

Deeply engrossed in the lecture were Dr. and Mrs. Edward L. Kickham, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Kickham and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kelly of Jamaica Plain.

A supper in the lounge of the country club followed the talk. Mrs. Joseph Finnegan, who just returned from a New York weekend, was the center of the merry group . . . Mrs. Harry McDonald smart in black velvet, Mrs. Fred eric Sheehan, in a long-sleeved frock of black net . . . Mrs. William J. Barry, who trimmed her dark gown with touches of gold lame, and Marjorie Dowd in grey crepe . . . blue buttons edging the draped neckline.

Dark Ensemble

Also Mrs. Edward McLaughlin, Mrs. John G. Downing, Mrs. M. L. Ryan, Cappy Ryan and Moira O'Connell.

Mrs. William Dalton topped her ensemble with a tunic of brocade and Mrs. William St. George edged her gown with bands of bugle beading. Mrs. John E. Swift chose black lace . . . its jacket edged with blue fox and Mrs. Frank D. Comerford wearing a silver fox cape with her black outfit.

Among the affairs preceding the Cameron-Dodnti nuptials was the shower Ruth Cuneo of Dorchester held at her home in Dorchester.

The engagement of Miss Cameron, daughter of Mrs. Charles Cameron was recently announced to Phillip Doduti of Somerville.

• • •

Elizabeth Gavin Engaged to Wed

Joining the ranks of the recently-engaged is Elizabeth K. Gavin of Dorchester, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Gavin announced her betrothal to Daniel Galvin of Dorchester at a tea held at their home.

Miss Gavin is a graduate of Boston Academy of Notre Dame and Boston Teacher's College. She is prominent in Aristos Club and Boston Teacher's Club.

Mr. Galvin, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Galvin of Dorchester, obtained degrees from Northeastern and Columbia Universities.

Regis Guild Hears Teacher

Edna Virginia Sheehan, teacher of dramatic expression, was the guest speaker at the Regis College Guild meeting this afternoon at the League House. She presented a one-act play, "A Christmas Fantasy" and Henry Van Dyke's "The Other Wise Man."

Musical program was rendered by Mrs. Ethel Ormsby Sullinger. Tea hostesses included Sue V. Sheridan, Mrs. William H. Thomas, Mrs. Joseph Tondorf and Mrs. T. J. Sullivan.

Penny Sale Held by Guild

Guild of St. Radegonde of Boston held a gigantic penny sale in the auditorium of Boston College High School last evening. Mrs. Joseph D. Driscoll and Mary Alice McMahon were chairmen of the affair.

Assisting were Agnes J. Trainor, Margaret V. Foley, Eleanor Devlin, Alice Callahan, Katherine Ewing, Mrs. Rava Kelly and Ann Petty.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

Walter Harrington of 349 Fellaway West, Medford, sends us this very pleasing copy of the photo we generally run in this column, and we know you'll agree that it's very well done.

What we are really after, boys and girls, is not so much a copy of what has already been run, but something entirely original and different. Cartoons, caricatures — don't be bashful. Floyd can take it!

Judging from the yarns you send us, we expected some hair-raising sketches, too, but up to now, our toupee is still resting quietly on top of our shiny dome.

River of Death

Mississippi Like Styx to Engineer Caught in Ice Jam

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Publication of your story may be delayed a bit while Floyd is in the war zone, because of the time it takes his mail to reach him. Floyd asks all his adventurers to "be patient with a hard workin' feller."

HELLO EVERYBODY:

All right, boys and girls, give a big hand to Carl M. Pratt, down at the Seamen's Church Institute, 25 South street, New York City. Carl is a marine engineer and he is going to tell us the story of his most exciting cruise. Carl's ship that time was a man-sized cake of ice, and he was signed on as captain, mate and crew, by a stick of dynamite. That cruise carried Carl half a mile down the Mississippi River, and then—well—then Carl climbed off that vessel of his — deserted his first command in mid-stream, and let her take care of herself. She could do that, but she couldn't take care of Carl.

That down-river journey was Carl's first voyage. He must have liked it, because right after that he took up marine engineering. I wonder if he ever had any thrills during his days of following the sea that came up to the standard set by that adventure on the Mississippi, just below the Keokuk Dam, in the early spring of 1911. I doubt it, boys and girls. I doubt it.

In those days before Carl thought of taking up marine engineering, he worked on construction jobs, and one of them was the great Keokuk Dam. He worked on it from start to finish, and he says he's never seen it since.

The original site of that dam was a rapids. The current came running through that spot so fast that it's a wonder the government was ever able to build a dam there at all. Certainly that current presented quite a problem to the engineers who were in charge of the work. They had to build strongly and solidly, because if they didn't, they'd likely wake up some morning and find that their preliminary structure had been carried eight miles or so downstream.

They had their hardest time during the long, hard winter of 1910-11. Then the old Mississippi froze over solid, and when it started to thaw, a huge jam of ice cakes collected around the construction work that threatened to carry the whole kahoodle away.

That's where Carl got into trouble. He volunteered as one of the crew who were to go out and dynamite the ice jam. For two days he went out on that great mountain of ice, placing the explosive which was to break up the jam. He got along all right the first day, and most of the second. But along toward evening of the second day—well—things sort of got exciting.

On the night of the second day Carl had just planted his fourth load of explosive and was starting back to shore. He was half way back to land again when suddenly the ice seemed to rise under him. There followed a terrible, ear-shattering explosion—and that's all Carl remembers for a few minutes.

The next thing Carl knew was that he was feeling wet and cold. "I turned over," he says, "and tried to make myself more comfortable, scarcely realizing what I was doing. On all sides I seemed to hear a bedlam of horns and whistles, and then all at once I realized what had happened. I was on a huge cake of ice, slowly floating down stream. And the whistles were the warnings to men farther on down the river to watch out for me and get me as I went past."

But it wasn't as easy to get Carl as those birds blowing the whistles seemed to think. No one could reach him from shore, because the distance between was filled with huge cakes of floating ice that would have crushed a boat the minute it was put in the water.

Carl tried to raise himself and found that he couldn't. He was stunned. His whole body seemed paralyzed. His brain wouldn't work, and there was a terrible, throbbing pain in his leg. Carl didn't find out until later why that leg pained him so, but the fact is that it was broken.

Just below the dam was a bridge, and Carl knew that if he passed that it was all up with him. He lay flat on his back in an agony of suspense and watched that bridge move toward him. Then, when he had covered about half the distance, he fainted again.

The last thing he thought of just before he went "out" was: "Will I come to before I reach the bridge?" He didn't know what he could do when he did get to it, but somehow it seemed to afford him a ray of hope—the last bit of hope that remained to him.

Carl was only unconscious for a few minutes. When he came to again, the bridge was still before him, looming up close at hand in the bright moonlight. He wondered if anyone would be there to make a try at saving him—wondered if he would slip by them unnoticed in the darkness below the bridge. Suddenly he heard voices, and somehow he felt then that everything was going to be all right.

Lanterns began to flare up all over the bridge. A dozen or more ropes were being lowered, and they were yelling to him to catch hold. Those ropes were strung all along the bridge. They hung low over the ice, and each one had a loop in the end. And the guy who had had the foresight to put those loops on the ropes was the one who saved Carl's life.

Carl couldn't get up to reach for those ropes, but he could move one leg. He picked out a rope dead ahead of him, and as the ice cake came down to meet it he raised that leg and thrust it through the loop. Then, as the rope tightened, he managed to get a hand hold on it and in another ten minutes he was on his way to the hospital.

And that's the story of how Carl Pratt became a sailor. Come on now, boys and girls — tell me the big story of YOUR lives. I'll be back in port tomorrow with another yarn.

UNTIL THEN—SHIP AHOY!

Floyd Gibbons, himself an adventurer of note, is never too busy to listen to the other fellow's experience. He wants to hear the story of the biggest thrill in YOUR life, and wants to pay you ten dollars for it. Floyd says anyone can draw down one of those ten dollar checks, or win the hundred that he gives for the best TRUE adventure story of the month. Literary ability has nothing to do with it. BUSINESS BOSTON AMERICAN FINANCE
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

LEWIS HANEY ON 1936:

Present Momentum SHOULD AID BUSINESS IN Further Expansion

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University.)

New York, Dec. 10—Business activity held up very well last week. While there is some thought that a little reaction may come early next year, it seems that enough momentum has been gained to carry the expansion further by next spring.

Many people seem to have money and are spending it more freely. Favoring this condition are WPA spending, the automobile industry's early season, the favorable income of many farmers, and the growing use of small-loan credits. Not only are more stores selling furs, etc., on the installment plan, but banks are going into the small-loan business.

Of course, colder weather and approach of Christmas have stimulated trade.

So, while there are considerable labor disturbances, shortage of semi-skilled labor, high living costs, high taxes, and political uncertainties, the business outlook is good.

The steel industry, considering the season, continues to point distinctly upward, and the failure to advance finished steel prices for the first quarter does not seem to have reduced the buying. The fact that the machine tool business is doing better than usual for the season is a favorable augury.

No sign of any reaction in the automobile industry has yet appeared. The stocking of dealers has now been attended to, and the trade-in problem has increased, but the retail demand for new cars continues surprisingly good. One straw is seen in the fact that Cook County (Chicago and vicinity) registrations in November were 5549 against 4836 in October and 2917 a year ago.

• • •

Favorable reports come from the textile industries. Cotton goods production rose last week. Rayon and wool production continues at a high level.

Lumber production strikes one of the few "sour" notes. Railway carloadings remain inconclusive and doubtful, the figure for last week probably being off very slightly more than usual for the season.

But retail trade in most lines and sections has been booming.

• • •

Wholesale commodity prices continue to fluctuate uncertainly, and last week again averaged a trifle lower. This was chiefly due to declines in wheat, lard, and sugar; although hides, tin, silk, and rosin were also lower. Cotton, cottonseed oil, and wool tops were up a little.

Two great uncertainties are holding commodity markets in check. One is the pending decisions concerning AAA, notably the Hoosac Mills case. Many profess to fear that if the artificial policies by which the administration is holding farm prices up were stopped, prices would decline. The other is the European war situation. If peace should be near, the wheat and copper markets might be weaker for a time.

But stocks of most commodities have been reduced, and "credit inflation" is developing. Any reaction in prices would be very temporary. Incidentally, the lease on life gained by the Laval Administration in France postpones the danger of franc devaluation, which should help "international commodities."

• • •

Gold continued to pour in last week, however, lifting the New Deal gold hoard to a high record of over 10 billion dollars (of 59 cents each). Excess bank reserves mounted to a new high.

Our federal public debt also broke all records by rising well above 30 billions of dollars. The administration borrowed over a billion and paid 2¾ per cent, so evidently our credit is not the best.

Washington made it clear that no control over credit is contemplated at present. The notion is that as long as inflated credit runs parallel to inflated business activity, it is O. K.

1936 Outlook Held BETTER

BUSINESS ASKS HANDS OFF

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
(Copyright 1935, By Universal Service)

New York, Dec. 10—The open season for business forecasting for 1936 is at hand, and Colonel Leonard P. Ayres, economic soothsayer of Cleveland, in predicting that 1936 will be somewhat better than 1935, succeeded in being an early bird among the predictors once

In my contacts with business and financial executives, I find a significant renaissance of hope that, once some political uncertainties are corrected, the American process of annual increments in raising popular living standards, which was checked during the depression, will be resumed.

The growing viewpoint is important. It means that business and finance have entered a new chapter of our economic history. They have passed out of the period of seeking positive stimulants and aid from government, and are now more concerned with inducing government to remove deadening restrictions.

Of course, this change of trend is one of degree only. No one seriously advocates or expects laissez faire. Most business wants government interference in the form of protective tariff rates, and there is a growing willingness to give the farmers a counterpart for the tariff.

• • •

A leading house of issue has recently pioneered in developing a new and longer technique for advertising new security offerings under the conditions of regulation by the SEC. In the past, so-called "Long" announcement in place of the highly skeletonized form used by other timid houses who have been feeling their way under new operating rules.

But, by putting through the Long ad in getting other leading houses to join them in syndicates sponsoring such announcements, the pioneer has demonstrated that they believed fuller detail could thus be presented to the financial public without risk of legal reprisals.

• • •

A spokesman for the House indicated that, though in the recent seller's bond market it would have been difficult to have marketed the new issues without such elaborate factual presentation, it felt that it was unwise to do the marketing while the basic facts were thus widely disseminated in the press.

WPA Research PLAN

TO SPEND MILLIONS

By International News Service

Washington, Dec. 10—The WPA is going to spend $12,000,000 employing some 24,000 "white collar" workers to find out why so many millions of industrial workers are not working.

Corrington Gill, assistant WPA administrator, said today the purpose of the program—called the "National Research Program"—will be "for collecting information essential to the factual guidance of the administrative policy and action."

"As production volume has increased in the past, employment has decreased, even during the 'boom' years, Gill said.

"During the period from 1929 to 1929," he said, "the physical volume of production in manufacturing industries increased 37 per cent, while employment dropped about two per cent; freight car loadings increased six per cent from 1923 to 1929 while employment on steam railroads declined 10 per cent; the production of coal increased 10 per cent from 1919 to 1929 and was accompanied by a decrease in employment of about 14 per cent. Despite an increase in the production of agricultural commodities 500,000 agricultural workers were displaced between 1919 and 1927."

• • •

Ever since 1928, according to Gill, reports show that the output per man-hour in manufacturing industries increased appreciably—25 per cent, thus resulting in increased unemployment.

Between 14,000,000 and 17,000,000 have been unemployed during the last four years, or approximately one-third of the "gainful" workers, Gill estimated.

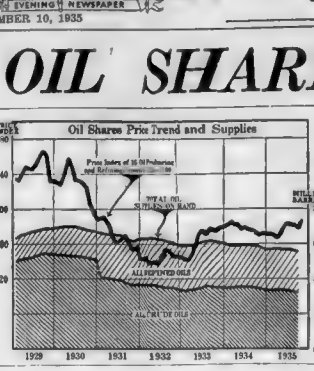
Because of technological improvements, even a resumption of former production levels in industry would not provide re-employment and new employment in proportion to the volume of production, according to the WPA.

MEETING Is Postponed

Lack of a quorum has caused a postponement of the monthly meeting of the Western Union Telegraph Company directors until December 17. Originally scheduled for today, the meeting is arousing interests in Wall Street circles in view of gossip that the board may consider resumption of dividends

There have been no disbursements on the stock since early in 1932.

OIL SHARES UP IN NOVEMBER



Highest Since 1931

Oil shares in November reached the highest price since February, 1931, according to an index of 15 producing and refining company issues, compiled by Standard Statistics.

The November average price of 86.7 (based on 1926 as 100) compares with the depression low of 37 in June, 1932.

The recovery in oil shares is mainly due to improvement in internal oil conditions.

For a long while the most outlandish of major industries, the petroleum field apparently has been trying to mend its ways.

Federal and state efforts to curb excesses, both in production and methods, have brought about a closer voluntary intra-industry movement toward co-operation.

Results in one direction are shown on this cart. The total supply of all oils on hand has dropped consistently during the past six years.

Most of the reduction has been achieved in stocks of crude oils.

In the beginning of 1931 the Bureau of Mines revised its compilation of such stocks, transferring all grades of California heavy crude and residual fuel to the "refined" classification.

BANK DEBITS Reported Higher

Debits to individual accounts, as reported by banks in leading cities for the week ended December 4, which included only five business days, aggregated $8,849,000,000, or 15% above the corresponding week last year, which also included only five business days

Aggregate debits for 141 cities for which a separate total has been maintained since January, 1919, were $8,044,000,000, against $8,003,000,000 the preceding week

COMMODITY Prices Decline

Following four consecutive weekly advances the wholesale commodity price average, compiled by the National Fertilizer Association, showed a slight decline in the week ended December 7.

The index for the week stood at 79.9% of the 1926-28 average, against 80.1 in the opening week, 79.4 a month ago and 75.4 a year ago.

Crude Oil Off

Daily average production of crude oil in the United States in week ended December 7 totaled 2,804,960 barrels, a decrease of 31,848 barrels from the preceding week, according to the Oil & Gas Journal.

FARM Income EXPANDS

DUE TO HEAVY MARKETINGS

In October, for the second consecutive month, the quantity of farm products marketed was abnormally large, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

Despite last year's short harvest, which, under ordinary conditions, could have been reflected in a curtailed volume of sales until the end of this year, the quantity of farm products marketed in October was 7.2 per cent larger than in the same month of 1934.

This increase was apparently due partly to the sale of livestock from the capital supply and partly to the early marketing of this year's crops.

Notwithstanding the larger supply coming to market in October, prices continued the upward trend which started in August. The price level in October was 6.9 per cent higher than a year ago. As a result of the larger supply and the higher price level, farm cash income from marketings amounted to $793,000,000 in October as against $692,000,000 in the same month last year, an increase of 14.6 per cent.

This brought farm income from marketings for the first ten months to $5,099,000,000, an increase of 5.8 per cent over the $4,819,000,000 received in the same period last year.

Payments

The government's benefit payments to the farmers in October amounted to only $58,000,000 this year, against $104,000,00 last year, but this decrease was more than offset by the increase in income from marketings.

Total income received in October consequently amounted to $851,000,000 this year, as against $796,000,000 last year, an increase of 6.9 per cent. For the ten months farming power showed more of a gain, amounting to 9.8 per cent, because the farmers benefited not only from a larger income, but from lower prices for goods which they bought. The price index of such goods in October, on the basis of 1929 as 100, was 80.4 this year, as against 82.4 last year.

For the first 10 months, benefit payments were higher than a year ago, but declined sharply in October. They amounted to $464,000,000 this year, as against $431,000,000 last year.

As the result of this gain as well as the gain in income from marketings, total farm income for the first 10 months was 6.0 per cent larger than a year ago. The farmers' purchasing power showed an increase of 3.0 per cent.

In view of the trend during September and October to market an abnormally large quantity of farm products, it now seems logical to expect that farm income for the full year 1935 will be larger than the amount received in 1934, especially since no particular price weakness has yet developed.

HAVE RAILROADS FAILED?

HILL ANSWERS Regulation Deplored

By Associated Press

Cincinnati, Dec. 10—Pleading that railroads be treated "on a business basis," J. B. Hill, president of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, said in an address prepared for delivery today that "We want the government to get out of the transportation business in the inland waterways."

"Have the Railroads Failed?" was his topic before a luncheon at the annual meeting of the Ohio Valley transporation advisory board.

Hill observed that only in the matter of a "fair return to investors" have they "partially failed," but declared there were two principal causes

"The depression, which has affected all business and the competition on unequal terms of other forms of transportation.

"The depression is the major cause of the railroads' present position," he declared. "Could they obtain a general increase of 20 to 25 per cent in volume of traffic, their present situation would be much improved"

Inland waterway improvements, Hill contended, have been made at the expense of the taxpayer to provide cheap transportation for private interests operating therein without paying tolls, with but meager reduction in price to consumer of goods handled." The rail lines "carry the entire load" in taxes, he declared, "much of which goes to the support of the very agencies which compete with them."

Federal regulation forbidding pooling of additional lines without the certificate of the Interstate Commerce Commission," he said, "the government and the State . . . have paralleled railroad lines with super-highways, over which great commercial carriers operate . . .

"We have for years preached that if the theory of regulation originally founded on monopoly is sound for steam railroading, it is no longer sound as applied to railroads alone, which are no longer a monopoly, but should be equally applied to other commercial forms of transportation, highways, waterways, airplanes and pipelines," Hill said.

Bond Issue Delayed

Consolidated Oil Corp. has filed an amendment with SEC delaying offering date of its $75,000,000 bonds to December 16.

Auto Workers Incomes Higher

Detroit, Dec. 10 (AP)—The Automobile Manufacturers' Association reported today that the incomes of automotive workers during 1935 will be at least 30 per cent higher than in 1934.

The hourly wage rate averages 78 cents, the report said, which is 6 per cent above 1934 and 8.5 per cent higher than in 1929. The rate compares with an average for all manufacturing industries of 57 cents an hour, the association said.

The report pointed out, however, that because of methods used to spread employment, the workers' annual incomes are not as high as they were in 1929.

Offsetting this in part is a decline of 20 per cent in living costs from the 1929 level

Employment in the industry, excluding parts plants, averaged 289,582 last year, and 320,848, a gain of 10.7, this year, the association reported.

The total 1934 payroll was $322,073,000, and in 1935 it is estimated at $411,894 000, an increase of 27.8 per cent.

RAILWAY Reorganization

New York, Westchester & Boston Railway Co. First Mortgage Bondholders' Protective Committee, of which Irving A. Sarlorius is chairman, announced that it intended to petition for leave to intervene in the reorganization proceedings of the company at the federal court hearing in New Haven on December 14.

The hearing will determine whether to appoint a trustee for the property or to continue the debtor in possession.

TRADE TREATY

Benefits

N. E. RAIL, Industry

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

New England manufacturers and the Boston & Maine Railroad are likely to receive considerable benefits from the trade agreements the United States recently completed with Canada.

The recommendations of a New York wire house to buy the various stock issues of the Boston & Maine, which we reported to readers last week, was prompted by considerations of the above.

A joint study by the Boston & Maine, with the co-operation of Canadian railroad officials, and the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce at Boston and the Boston New Bureau, released today, indicates that the tonnage of the northern New England road, both north and southbound, may be expected to derive considerable benefits in traffic. Further, various industries in New England may be substantially helped.

• • •

The high spots of the survey affecting New England industry must be briefly summarized here due to restricted space. From this territory, machinery, particularly textiles, from such companies as Saco-Lowell and Crompton & Knowles, should be in demand. Miscellaneous manufacturers of paper from Holyoke and other points show a good percentage increase. Then, too, New England textiles should benefit from reduction of duties. England dominates the Canadian market in this field, but previously promised quick delivery is expected to count in boosting textile exports. All told, it is a cheering picture for New England industry, although somewhat disappointing for agriculture.

• • •

Notebook: Personal choice of the Boston & Maine stocks is the preferred "A" . . . A look intrigued into 1936 with the United Business Service of Boston reveals the copper, chemical, machinery, steel, iron, leather, motor accessory and building supply industries have above average prospects . . . Others are also to be found in the service's current report . . . Which, incidentally, contains a timely warning against price increase . . . To date these fears not have materialized and buying power has swelled so steadily . . . But now the danger point is near and certain merchants might prove detrimental to sales.

• • •

Market action is not as thoroughly satisfying as we had hoped it would be but "a day's" . . . Has numerous minor danger signals flying and we suggest caution. The weakness early today, following Monday's unsatisfactory close, prompts the suggestion that traders be prepared to clean out accounts of higher priced speculative holdings. The 138 level on the Dow-Jones industrial index is now the definite market line on the downside and it should not be touched, let alone broken.

• • •

Shorts: The group of stocks given here last for readers to watch following the accumulation . . . Recoveries from downward signals was the first hint of weakness . . . Recoveries we hoped for were far from satisfactory . . . Investors with the long range view of market matters need not worry . . . But traders should definitely prepare for squalls . . . We have tried to keep our lists in shape by making additions through a reaction . . . And do not think a sudden quick dip would prove overly harmful.

AUSTEN LAKE

Bruins, in Showdown With Maroons, Turn to Violence

Austen Lake

THERE IS THE PROSPECT of a messy clean-up job for the Garden's janitors tonight when the fuzz and splinters settle after the game between the Bruins and Montreal Maroons. Being pretty sore at themselves for taking repeated pastings, the Bruins are mumbling cusses under their breath and cuddling a black plush grouch.

The usually paternal countenance of Frank "Boniface" Patrick is scrambled in a surly pug with his underlip stuck out like the tailboard on a truck. And several of the hired hands have been warned to keep their duffle packed for quick getaways, if they do not turn on the heat tonight and boost the rubber plug into the trap for some goals.

This is showdown night, in which the Bruins are dropping the technical niceties of scientific skate-dancing and stick-handling and are going in for some of that crude hip-and-thigh assault. And not being sweet children with parlor habits, the Maroons are likely to ask themselves, "Well, what t'ell," and turn the scene into a pier-head brawl.

Toy Carnival

THE HEAVY TRADE RESPONSE to the Ski Show has prompted the Garden people to plan a Tiny Tots' Toy Show next week, with a Wonderland scene of mechanical beasts, miniature railways that wind around plaster Alps, and the marvels of nursery invention.

Pawnshop Trophies

NOTICING A GOLD athletic medal in a window tray of a downtown pawnshop, I stepped in for a curious peek. It was tarnished and encrusted with dust, yet a bit of athletic jewelry that might have cost the Millrose A. C. of New York $20. Engraved on the back was the legend, "Wanamaker Mile, First, Jose Ray, Illinois A. C."

The shopkeeper had other sports medals tucked in his safe, disks of time-dulled gold and silver that bore the names of several famous athletes etched on the reverse sides. They represent one of the little tragedies of amateur athletics, emblems sold or pawned by disillusioned, penniless heroes.

I am told that 75 per cent of the valuable medals won by celebrated athletes turn up in loan shops, or in the hands of buyers of precious metals to be melted into ingots. The athletes never confess their trophy sales, knowing that A. A. U. law forbids it under penalty of being cast into professional darkness.

* * *

THAT PRACTICALLY PRICELESS sports personality, Walter O'Hara, has just resigned as a director of the Boston Garden. Unable to bring off his fantastic dream of making the old roof-tree an indoor athletic paradise with himself as controlling deity, he did the next best thing.

Belated Orchids to Marblehead

of the Marblehead kids were granted recognition on local All-choices, and the team itself was ranked with an army of others.

The jury of New York football scholars who watched the game are amazed to learn that there are a half-a-dozen schoolboy teams with higher rating in this section. It illustrates what a wealth of kid football material is developed annually around Greater Boston, most of which is raided by distant colleges. During the season just ended more than 150 New England boys were distributed among the lineups of colleges east of the Alleghenys, wheedled away, for the most part, by varsity Pied Pipers, playing the magic tune of free board and scholarships.

Race Bettors Lose 50 Per Cent

THE RACE TRACKS and the state gobble fully one-half of the liquid betting capital which horse and dog gamblers take to the track. Figure it out. In a $500,000 pari-mutuel handle the actual presentee cash is about 20 per cent, or $100,000. The track and state take 10 per cent of the total handle, or $50,000.

Recess for Danno

JUST A YEAR AGO from next Sunday, Danno O'Mahoney landed in Boston, homesick, nearly broke and suspicious of American wrestling. In the interval of 12 months he has wrestled 152 matches, an average of one every two and one-half days. He has performed before a total of more than half a million people and a gross gate of more than $750,000. He has wrestled in every state in the Union and travelled over 50,000 miles, mostly by airplane.

So now, for being a good boy, his body-masters are going to give him a leave of absence following his New York bout with Don George on December 16. For a month Danno, now grown slightly mat-marred, with a smart light in his eye and a gnarled ear, can revel in leisure.

The copyright owner have granted him permission to visit his native Irish heath, providing he will be back bright and early in January to start the mad merry-go-round all over again.

Next to Boston, Toronto has been his most enthusiastic spot. Houston, Texas, ranks third. Yet Danno's title is not recognized unanimously in these United States. California, which likes to find out what everybody is thinking and then think something else, considers Vincent Lopez as the one true and only champ.

PRINCE OF FENCE BUSTERS NOW MEMBER OF SOX

Foxx, Marcum Traded to Red Sox

The Sox management will assume all the obligations of that contract.

Though he has been in the majors close to ten years, Foxx is now only 27 years old, which is comparatively young as ball players go.

He broke in with the Athletics at the tender age of 17 as catcher. He was shifted to first base and was a regular at the both for the As before he was 20 and a world's series star before he cast his first vote.

He's been rated as one of the game's greatest hitters since the day of his debut. Except for one season when he fell below the .300 mark, he has always finished among the top flight hitters and home run manufacturers.

'IRON MAN' MARCUM

He is versatile as well as able. He's played a lot of third base and started last season as the A's first string receiver.

Jimmy was the last survivor of the championship Philadelphia team of 1929, which had Max Bishop at second, Joe Boley at short, Jimmy Dykes at third, Al Simmons, Mule Haas and Bing Miller in the outfield, Mickey Cochrane back of the bat and Lefty Grove, "Rube" Walberg and George Earnshaw as the pitching aces.

Marcum is older than Foxx but has been in the "big show" only two years. He's a product of the Southern League, where he was known as a mighty slugger and steady outfielder as well as a pitching ace.

Marcum's 1935 record wasn't impressive, but it was the best turned in by any Mackian twirler. Few pitchers in the majors pitched more innings over the campaign.

DEAL STRENGTHENS SOX

Rhodes after a fair season in 1934, chalked up but a single victory last season. Savino, a promising, husky young catcher, spent the entire campaign on the Syracuse farm.

"We ought to go places next year," said Collins after announcing the deal. "Our big weakness last season was lack of a clean-up hitter. We have the best in the business now in Foxx. Jimmy will bat fourth, the spot held down by Manager Joe Cronin last summer.

"Marcum should also help us a lot. At least, he's bound to be an improvement over Rhodes."

4 ICE LEAGUE Games at Arena

The Monitor A. C. will play the Clarendon Hockey Club, Shawmut Indians will tangle with the Globe H. C., the Owl H. C. will clash with Jackson-Curtis and the Boston Maroons will take on the B. M. Independents.

Dusty Cooke Released in $200 Bond

Durham, N. C., Dec. 10 (AP) Allen L. (Dusty) Cooke, outfielder for the Boston Red Sox, will face trial here December 23 on a charge of assault and battery with a deadly weapon in connection with the injury of a Negro youth here Sunday.

Owen quoted Cooke as saying he did not report the accident because he was in "quite of a bit of hurry." Cooke was released under $200 bond.

10 Games Carded For Husky Six

The remainder of the schedule calls for a clash with Dartmouth, Dec. 21, then with M. I. T., Bowdoin, Brown, Mass. State, New Hampshire, home and home, Bowdoin and Brown.

Natural Ability Ace's Own Secret

Tells About Boyhood

(This is the first of a series of EXCLUSIVE articles by Jimmy Foxx—as told to Austen Lake—telling the story of the rise and success of the slugging American League baseball star.)

By JIMMIE FOXX
(As told to Austen Lake)

Having been asked to write about what I know about batting, and to illustrate the subject with my own experiences, I find it a trifle difficult to know just where to begin, for batting, from my observation and experience, is not a subject that can be squeezed into one set of rules.

Batting styles differ sharply with the different batting stars. Babe Ruth, for example, takes a different stance at the plate than Al Simmons. Rogers Hornsby's style differs from that of the famous Ty Cobb's. No two men place their feet just the same, hold the bat just the same, face a pitcher just the same. And yet each man gets spectacular results.

It all sums up to the fact that each player must work out his problems for himself, learning how best to utilize his own particular physical equipment and talents, and it is thus extremely difficult to particularize about the art. Still there are certain common denominators unquestionably underlying all successful batting styles and certain basic tricks that any youngster can work out for himself and graft into a successful batting style of his own.

It will be my intention here to speak these basic things and to tell something of the part they have played in my own baseball career.

First of all, any successful athlete must have sufficient physical equipment, and a good batter needs strong hands, wrists and forearms. Especially from the wrists, as in golf, comes that powerful snap that crashes the bat into the ball, and the good batter must be able to meet the ball squarely with a sound, ringing blow.

Came by Power Naturally

Some players develop this power of hand, wrist and forearm by systematic exercises. In my case, I came by it naturally.

When I was a little lad, part of my job around the family farm at Sudlersville, Maryland, was to help milk our herd of cows. And from the time my chubby fists were large enough to perform the trick, and my knees strong enough to grip a two-gallon pail, I sat under the stern end of our cows and milked until my wrists were sore and my fingers stiff. Then, of course, there was plowing to be done in the spring and fall, so that hired help being scarce, I took my turn with that, too.

But I thrived on hard work and, somehow, always had plenty to eat and I know now that we were a happy family. If we were poor in material things, at least it was an independent sort of poverty and a needy neighbor could always be sure of a helping hand from Sam Dell Foxx, my father.

Between times my brother and I went to the Sudlersville school, walking the five miles back and forth and finding time to run, shout, fight and laugh with the neighborhood pack. And although it never occurred to me to wonder why, I found that in our races across the pastures I was usually several steps ahead of the others, and in the short, fierce wrestling matches of the school yard I had the strength of back and arms to do somewhat better than hold my own.

Must Have Talent at the Start

I was rather proud of my strength and took a boyish delight in turning down the hand of the older boys with a quick snap of the wrist, and the brawny paws and big forearms that had been made hard from years of milking stood me in good stead. In fact, they are the real reason why I can now drive a baseball so much farther than the average distance and that is why I have stated that I believe a strong pair of wrists is the most important factor in batting, or, for that matter, in almost any form of com-

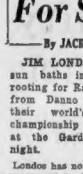
Mr. Boston Londos Cheers For Steele

By JACK CONWAY

JIM LONDOS, still taking sun baths in California, is rooting for Ray Steele to win from Danno O'Mahoney in their world's heavyweight championship wrestling bout at the Garden on Friday night.

Londos has not wrestled since he was pinned by O'Mahoney at Fenway Park early last summer. The Greek heavyweight was badly used up by the Irishman and decided to take a six months' layoff.



Mr. Boston

"I do not believe there is any truth to the report Londos and Steele will retire. I look to see him start a comeback campaign next year. O'Mahoney's defeat by Steele at the Garden would hasten Londos' decision.

Londos does not care to attempt to win back the championship by meeting the Irishman.

"O'Mahoney violates every rule of wrestling," Londos told me as he nursed his numerous injuries following his defeat at the hands of Danno. "He punches like a fighter, while he uses illegal holds when at close quarters."

Steele is a rough and ready type of grappler who has been well schooled in the fundamentals of the mat game. He can rough up an opponent as well as match him at science.

If Steele should win from O'Mahoney, you will find Londos returning to the wrestling wars early in January. Londos always had an edge on Steele and would probably figure he could defeat him again.

Notre Dame

BOSTON will get its first glimpse of Notre Dame football as played by the great Irish stars from South Bend, Indiana at the Garden tomorrow night. The clash between the Athletic Notre Dame eleven and the All-Collegiate team is expected to set a new standard for football thrills.

Frank Carideo, Marty Brill, Bucky O'Connor, Art McMammon, "One Play" O'Brien, Tommy Yarr and the other former Notre Dame greats will set the fastest football pace in the Hub's fistic city. The All-Notre Dame team has blazed its way to five straight victories this season and believes it could defeat any eleven in the country.

Carideo has turned down numerous offers to turn professional. He has carried on with great success as assistant coach to Ralph Sasse, former Notre Dame coach, at Mississippi State.

"One Play" O'Brien was the young man Rockne would toss into a close game when he wanted a sure receiver of a forward pass who could gallop 40 to 80 yards for a touchdown as the occasion required. O'Brien never failed "Rock."

CITY SKATER HAS CHANCE

YOU GOTTA BEND DOWN TO WIN SKATE RACES

Must Train Indoors --Jaffee

Champ Gives Exercises

This is the first of a series of articles on ice skating by Irving Jaffee, holder of three Olympic championships and the world's professional title, designed to aid all entrants in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser Silver Skates Derby, to be held at ice rinks to be announced, park location on Sunday, January 26. Readers wishing to obtain any additional information write to Irving Jaffee, Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser, and it will be answered in Jaffee's columns.

By IRVING JAFFEE

The city skaters' constant discouragement by the weather man, which many entrants in the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser's Silver Skates Derbies on January 26, might have to encounter, is nothing new to me.

I have done most of my training around New York city, where lack of ice is no more of a rarity than it might be in New England.

Even when I could not skate during my training for events I always strove toward physical perfection, for I have found that the condition of your body is of utmost importance in any athletic competition.

Training Stunts

Some of the stunts I did when I had to overcome mild unseasonable winter weather, in my training for important Silver Skates and International Contests, that I can recommend to all entrants for our Silver Skates Derbies are:

On each morning before attending business, I would stand in front of an open window and go through a routine of stretching and general bending exercises.

First, with hands on hips, I would rise on my toes, stretching my arms out sidewards, and then drop down on my heels, bringing the arms down again.

Then I would place my hands on hips, bend the knees and stretch arms forward. This exercise is a great developer for the legs and gives you the same action as when you are striding on ice. As a finale before a shower and breakfast, I would lie on my back on the floor and kick up toward the ceiling, hands on hips to balance myself.

Tomorrow I will take up some additional dieting and non-ice skating training hints. See you then.

There have been 14 players invited to join the East team, with eight yet to be named.

GERMANS REMOVE ALL ANTI-SEMITIC SIGNS

Jews Assured of Fair Play at Games

The Amateur Athletic Union after a stormy session in New York Sunday decided against engaging in any "boycott" of the 1936 Olympic games in Germany. While many protests have been voiced against the participation of American athletes in the Olympics this year because of Nazi religious persecution, Germany has continued with her elaborate preparations for the opening of the Olympic winter games at Garmisch-Partenkirchen in the German Alps, near Munich, on February 6.

Universal Service herewith presents the first of a series of four timely articles by William Shirer, Universal's Berlin correspondent, descri ·g those preparations and the general outlook for America's teams in the winter events.

By William Shirer
Copyright 1935 by Universal Service

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, Dec. 10—The signs that last summer bellowed "Jews get out" and "Jews unwanted" have now been quietly removed from this most popular of German winter resorts and all is ready for the opening of the fourth Olympic games here on February 6.

Last summer all the unwanted Jews got out, but this winter they may return unmolested, especially foreign Jews, at least for the duration of the games from February 6-16.

This by explicit promise of the Nazi state. The protection, of course, applies to any participants who may be Semitic.

On the success or failure of the winter games will hang much of the success or failure of the summer games in Berlin, and the Germans, who have left nothing done in technical preparation, are anxious that no untoward political or racial incident shall occur to ruin their hopes, which are high.

Strive for Success

For it is no secret here that the Nazis, from Hitler on down, want to make the 1936 Olympics a smashing success, not only for the benefit of sport lovers, but for themselves.

As Germans who have had bitter experience of being the underdogs of Europe since the war, they want to show the world that they can put over the Olympics better or at least as well as America and Holland did.

As Nazis they want to show the millions of Germans who have not yet been converted to Nazidom that the nations of the world, by attending and participating in the games, recognize Nazi Germany, are willing to be guests of Nazi Germany, receive its hospitality and have their athletes participate with Nazi Germany's Aryan athletes, whatever may be the bitterness and the opposition of world Jews and others who resent German Fascism.

Germany naturally has the largest contingent, with 143 entrants. The United States has entered 62, but this figure undoubtedly will be radically cut down before the American team sails. Norway has entered 50 and Sweden 46, but about a round dozen to these, together with a handful from Finland, are expected to be sufficient to walk off with most of the honors in skiing and speed-skating, unless America or Canada should spring some "dark horses."

Sonja to Perform

The ice-hockey championship is conceded to lie between Canada and the United States, but 19 European hockey teams have been entered anyway. Sonja Henie will be present to annex her perennial figre-skating Olympic title.

Tickets, of which a fairly good pre-game sale is reported, go at the following prices: A season ticket, giving you the best seats in the covered stands at the ice stadium, at the skiing stadium, at Riessersee, where the speed skating will be held, and at the famous "Bayern" curve on the Olympic bob-run, which takes in about all there is to see Garmisch, costs 200 marks (about $80.)

Season tickets good for a reserved seat in the ice ring only, cost 110 marks (about $44). Others, good for standing room in the same place, cost 55 marks (about $22).

For the first time in Olympic history, the success of the winter games, or more particularly, that part of them devoted to hockey and fancy skating, will not depend upon the fickle weather, so unkind at both St. Moritz in 1928 and at Lake Placid in 1932.

The Germans have built an artificial ice rink, guaranteed to work even if spring comes in February. Its 100 feet wide and 200 feet long and is surrounded by a stadium accomodating 8000 spectators, 1500 of them in covered seats.

Twenty-eight lmaps with a total strength of 80,000 candle power will enable the important events to be run off at night.

U. S. Pair Skating Champs in Frolic

By Will Connell

A spectacular pair skating exhibition by Miss Maribel Vinson and George E. B. Hill, United States figure skating champions, is the latest feature arranged for the Gala Skaters' Frolic at the Boston Arena on Saturday night.

The pair hold the National championship and are ranked with the best skaters in the world. Miss Vinson has the U. S. women's solo skating crown, and Hill is rated with the best singles performer. Both will give singles exhibitions in addition to pair skating.

Figure Skaters

Miss Polly Blodgett, National junior champion; Roger Turner, many times National men's champion; Miss Jean Tozzer, former novice queen, are among the Skating Club of Boston stars in the Frolic.

The figure skaters will give their thrilling exhibitions early on the colorful Frolic program. Thus they will have perfect ice conditions and can be at their very best for the first time this season.

Queen of the Frolic competition for the beautiful fur jacket donated by Scott Furriers; Most Beautiful costume event with a radio the award; Most Unique costume event with shoe skate combinations donated by South End Hardware Co. for the winner, and numerous other special events for valuable prizes are on the bill.

Tickets are priced at 40 cents for admission, 75 cents, $1.10 and $1.65 for reserved seats. Price of the ticket is the sole cost. There are no extra fees for any of the events.

Ticket sale is going on at a brisk rate at Christmas Basket Fund Headquarters, 294 Devonshire st., just off Summer st., Boston, and at the Boston Arena box office.

TROJANS Play Pitts COURTMEN

By Murray Kramer

College, club and professional basketball is coming to the front for a winter of heavy activity, according to the schedules and plans of ambitious promoters and zealous managers.

The first attraction of the year takes place at the Boston Arena Thursday night when the Boston Trojans clash with Alabama Pitts' All Stars.

Pitts, who received oodles of publicity when he was released from Sing Sing, has tried his hand at baseball and football and is now barnstorming with a powerful quintet as a guard.

Bob McDermott and Jerry Nemeck will be the forwards, "King Kong" Pelkinton will jump center and Al Wyka will be at the other guard.

McDermott led the pro basketball league in scoring last year. Wyka is a veteran campaigner who played with the Newark Mules last year.

The newly organized Trojans will be made up largely of local court stars. Manager Sammy Snyder will name his team from Eddie Thompson, Fred Daley, Johnny Crowley, Bud Buckley, Sam Shapiro and Dick Morey.

There will be a preliminary game before the featured attraction takes place in which Leopold Morse will battle the Employers Liability Insurance five.

WINDMILL In Mat Whirl

Maxie "Windmill" Goldberg was added to Alex MacLean's card today for the wrestling show at the Arena tomorrow night which finds Leo Numa and Charlie Strack colliding in the feature, two falls out of three.

Goldberg, Jewish idol, will meet Ivan Petroff in one special bout, while Billy Sherwin will face "Silent" Abbott, deaf and dumb grappler, in another special.

Danno Downs Ed In Montreal Go

Quintet Seeks Tilts

The Charlesbank A. C. basketball team of the West End House wish to arrange games with any fast amateur teams in New England. For information concerning these games please communicate with George Brenner, Lafayette 3537, or write to 79 Chambers street, Boston.

Solid Silver Skates for Top Derby Award In Great Ice Race Tournament on Jan. 26

By Walter Kiley

Director Irving Jaffee, manager of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser first annual Silver Skates Derby to be held on January 26, today declared himself immensely gratified by the response to the early Derby announcements.

Today Jaffee makes public several important and vital announcements including the distances of the various events and the prizes to be awarded, which he declares to be the finest ever for an event of this nature.

Routes Graded

Distances are graded according to the age classes, the older boys and girls being better equipped physically to travel longer routes.

The finest prize in speed skating history is to be presented the winner of the Men's Senior Derby, a pair of solid silver skates, complete in a glass trophy case, an enduring memento of a notable achievement.

Silver plated skates for second and statue bronze skates are to be awarded for second and third place winners in the Senior Derby.

In the other boys' events, silver plated skates will be awarded the Derby winners, silver medals to the runner-ups go to the winner of the Girls' Senior Derby, chromium plated for second and statue bronze skates for third.

In addition a diamond studded medal, unusual and rare, will be new-up and bronze medals for thirds.

Sterling silver - plated trophy offered the Men's Senior Derby entrant who leads the lap, in other words, a lap prize similar to the system employed in eight-day bicycling racing.

Silver skates will be awarded as a special team prize, a trophy which can occupy most prominent position in a club room. Five sterling silver medals will also be donated to the five-man team which comes in with the highest point score.

Entries are coming in from all sections of New England. Director Jaffee urges you, both young and old, expert and novice alike, to join the skating parade at once. He also requests that pictures be included, of individuals, teams or coaches, in order that as many as possible may be printed.

Any Skates O. K.

Jaffee, "World's Fastest Human," again advises that any type of skates, regardless of age or nature, will fill the bill.

"Anything which looks like skates and which will propel you along ice will be eligible for the Silver Skates Derby," he states. "Skis alone are excluded," he adds.

BRUINS Get Rough TONIGHT

TOUGH FOE IN MAROONS

By Bill Grimes

Just as soon as he arrived back in Montreal after his first trip to Chicago, the loquacious Thomas Patrick Gorman, of the Maroons, let it be known that in the future any club attempting to give his world champions the "business" would find out what happened in some emergency hospital.

After numerous huddles, the powers that be have concluded that the cause of the poor showing of the Bruins is lack of body checking.

According to reports, the Bruins were told to step into the Chihawks, which they did, and still they wound up on the short end. Now, they say, the Bruins will be instructed to use their bodies against the Maroons tonight at the Boston Garden.

Dangerous Game

As I see it, it's one thing to check the Chihawks—providing you are able to get close enough to them to hit 'em—but it's a dangerous assignment to bodily contact the Maroons.

Capt. Eddie Shore, Babe Siebert and Roger Jenkins might be able to get away with some stiff body checks against the Maroons, but I shudder to visualize what will happen if some of the less husky members of the Bruins start bumping Lionel Conacher, Al Shields, Cy Wentworth, Hooley Smith and Dave Trottier.

In the event that the game gets away from the officials, an added attraction in the form of a riot may ensue.

Club Desperate

The Bruins are desperate. They have lost seven out of nine games. The youngsters are panicky and the veterans are tightening up. They would be better off to open up and pile into opponents' territory with little or no thought of back checking until such time as they have regained confidence in their ability to score goals.

Bear in mind that the Maroons will not be in a playful mood this evening. They are still foaming at the mouth over the 2 to 1 beating they took from the Americans last week in Toronto, the 3-2 tilt with Rangers in Madison Square Garden did not set well with the German gang.

SPARTAN LADY WILSON'S BEST BET

Advocate Junior in Third Race

By Dave Wilson
(Selections made for fast track)
BEST—SPARTAN LADY

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 10—Spartan Lady appears to have found a soft spot in the one mile and a sixteenth of the featured Washington Handicap.

This daughter of Crusader finished third to Jinnee and Postponement in a swiftly run sprint race only a few days back.

FIRST—STOOL PIGEON, REE, GRACE BUNTING

STOOL PIGEON, beaten one length by Ree last time, will be favored by a 20-pound shift in weights over his rival in this number. Under the weight arrangements, he figures to break on top and make every pole a winning one. REE drubbed the top one easily last time and again figures close up despite taking on 12 additional pounds. GRACE BUNTING, second to Mazyniata, was a dead short thoroughbred that day. She has trained brilliantly since then and should take it all if the top pair fail to parade postwards.

SECOND—SPERO, WASDANAPPI, SUNDROPS

SPERO'S most recent endeavor may be tossed into discard. She was outclassed that day. In front of that she was a galloping winner over weaker company. WASWANAPPI figures to offer the contention on strength of her last winning effort. SUNDROPS finished third to the top one last time, and figures next best.

THIRD—ADVOCATE JUNIOR, DUTIFUL, BY SURPRISE

ADVOCATE JUNIOR sticks out like the proverbial sore thumb on good New England performances. At home in any sort of going, he figures to never leave the issue in doubt. DUTIFUL, freshened up since the summer meeting in this sector, will be coming up fit and ready if fast morning trials are any criterion. BY SURPRISE figures best of the others.

FOURTH—STROPHE, GENTLEMAN, TULEYRIES STAR

STROPHE maintains this ordinary lot of juveniles. He finished third to Genie Palatine and Hi-Well last time out at Bowie and he needs only to duplicate that most recent endeavor in order to earn brackets. GENTLEMAN figures next best on the strength of a winning performance over Povel. TULEYRIES STAR should not experience much troubls in sharing in the spoils if given a chance to start.

FIFTH—POSTPONEMENT, MUCH GUSTO, UP AND UP

POSTPONEMENT, second to Jinnie, was the victim of poor racing luck that day. In front of that, he had cracked a track record in leading a shifty field under the wire. MUCHO GUSTO holds plenty of class and figures close up. He cakewalked to a weaker field last time. UP AND UP is dropping weight and gets in nicely under a feather of 104 pounds.

SIXTH—SPARTAN LADY, JINNEE, TIEMPO

SPARTAN LADY will again have JINNEE in a rof. He looks all over the one to fear despite a burdensome impost of 116 pounds. TIEMPO's last race goes for the end book. She is dropping 10 pounds.

SEVENTH—APATHY, RED LABEL, SOUND MONEY

APATHY'S most recent endeavor ago for the well-known Mr. Sweeney. He is dropping down a few notches and appears dieally placed. RED LABEL was outmatched salt time and that effort may be tossed into the ash can. SOUND MONEY will likely show marked improvement.

SUBSTITUTE—GENIE PALATINE, WISE KING, SURRY

Foxx's Own Life Story

Only lately I was talking to Chuck Klein, the great hitting outfielder of the Chicago Nationals, and Chuck said he believed that half the secret of his hitting power lay in the fact that, as a young man, he had worked twelve hours a day as furnace helper in an open hearth steel plant, where he had to pick away at the hard clay core in the back of the furnace so that the tons of molten steel could be released into the pouring ladel.

"Give me the workers," said Chuck, "and I will let the other fellow have the strong back and legs."

Of course, the average boy does not have a herd of cows or a steel plant handy so that he may strengthen his wrists in the manner that Klein and I did. But there are other methods, quite as good and certainly much more pleasant. One of them is a system that minor and major league players whose hands lack the standard strength necessary to their profession still use at the present time. They carry regulation handballs of semi-solid rubber in the pockets of their jackets and squeeze them as they walk along the street or while they are sitting idly in their hotel rooms. It is sometimes surprising how such a simple method as this will develop sturdy wrists.

I have come to believe through years of observing the greatest players of post-war baseball that batting is a knack that depends largely on the native talent that the boy has from the beginning. Some boys have better co-ordination than others, a close link between eyesight and the system of nerves that carries the brain messages to the muscles. And, of course, a boy can never find out how well he has been endowed by nature with these gifts until he has given himself a long and thorough trial.

NOTRE DAME'S FORMER GRIDIRON GREAT IN HUDDLE

Marty Brill, one of Knute Rockne's famed gridiron phantoms, is shown in a huddle with Manager George Brown of the Boston Garden, discussing the playing surface of the Garden on which the Notre Dame All-Stars will clash with an All-Star eleven from the East in a benefit Christmas basket fund game tomorrow night. Marty's most outstanding grid gem of his Notre Dame career was his scoring of three touchdowns against Coach Lud Wary's Pennsylvania eleven.

Faceoff at 8:30 p. m.

A Harvard-M. I. T. hockey game, which is due to test the capabilities of the strong Crimson sextet, opens the New England intercollegiate hockey season at the Arena tonight. The game is the feature of a double-header which matches the Harvard freshmen and Framingham High.

Although it hasn't been tested, Harvard is regarded as a candidate for the intercollegiate title, because of its unusual manpower.

Harvard, as Coach Joe Stubbs points out, lost its defense last season, and it is questionable whether the present defensemen will be able to fill the bill. Yet numbered among them are Russ Allen and Trat Hicks, captain and star of last year's undefeated freshman outfit.

Harvard also has a wealth of forwards in Captain Fred Moseley, center of the first line with Hovenanian and Sam Hallaway as wings; Ford, Ecker and Halliwell, the second line; the sophomore trio of Cutter, Roberts and Mecham; and four reserves in John Callaway, Dewey, Carr and Quinbey.

Mazyniata, steadied around the first turn, went up between Small Change and Good Jest midway of the back stretch, challenged strongly but was unable to stay with the winner. Small Change, had good speed while setting the pace, saved ground but weakened in in the last quarter mile.

A S. O. SIGN Up on Bowl Game

In one week of feverish buying, without a booth being opened, the 84,600 seats for the New Year's football game between Stanford and Southern Methodist were purchased.

The unprecedented rush for pasteboards will cost the participating schools and the Tournament of Roses committee a pretty penny.

BRILL Leads Irish TO TOWN

FORMER STAR IN GREAT SHAPE

By Bill Grimes

The All-Notre Dame football team arrived in Boston early this afternoon for its clash with the All-Collegiate eleven at the Garden tomorrow night.

Marty Brill, one of the most famous backs to ever play for Notre Dame, was enthusiastic about the prospects of playing against the All-Collegiate eleven at the Garden.

"I am in fine condition to play at top speed," said Marty. "I believe the same is true of the rest of our players. We shall show Boston football fans the kind of game that brought gridiron glory to Notre Dame.

"I visited George V. Brown at the Garden and took a peek at the surface where we shall play tomorrow night. A gridiron the size of the one at the Garden will enable us to do all of our stuff.

"I am glad to hear the All-Collegiate team possesses so much strength. It will compel us to step at top speed to win."

George Brown invited Brill and the other former Notre Dame greats to attend the hockey game at the Garden tonight.

According to the plans submitted to Superintendent Bob Murphy of the Garden by Joe Alvarez, chairman of the committee in charge of the game, the gridiron will be 240 by 116 feet.

Regulation Shoes

The playing surface will be covered with eight inches of wet and well-rolled loam, which will allow the gridsters to wear regulation football shoes and cleats. With lights and amplifier hung to the roof of the Garden, it will be possible for the kickers to get all the height necessary, when called upon to punt.

Bud Bonar will start at quarterback for Notre Dame, Frank Carideo, rated by the late Knute Rockne as the brainiest field general he'd ever seen in action, will see service.

Bucky O'Connor, the North Walpole, N. H. star, who jumped from a third string right halfback to national fame during the Notre Dame-Southern California game in 1929, will be at fullback, with Marty Brill and Steve Banas at the halfback positions.

The ex-South Bend line will comprise Devore and Kosky, starting ends, and "One Play" O'Brien as the reserve flankman; Greeney and Leahy, tackles; Pivarnek and Harris, guards, and Bowdre, center.

Build Up the Navy

PUBLIC attention has been focused upon bringing the American Navy up to its full strength, as defined in the London Naval treaty, and the public insistence that this be done has met with fine response in the Administration's present naval building program.

In most of the discussions of the subject, however, the fact has been overlooked that our NAVY PERSONNEL is dangerously deficient, and that throughout the year 1935 the American fleet was substantially undermanned.

The enlisted force of the Navy consisted of only 81,510 men throughout the year just passed. This amounts to but 81 per cent of the number estimated to adequately and efficiently man our fleet.

According to scientific standards the minimum of our Navy personnel should be at least 85 per cent of a full complement of men and officers.

There is no duty more imperative than to bring the number of our officers and enlisted men at least up to this minimum, and to see that it does not fall below it.

A Worthy Movement

A timely and important movement is revealed in the announcement of the Made in America Club, Inc., that industries in twenty-six states have allied themselves with the club's program of defending American markets against foreign competition.

Among the men associated with John W. Kieckhefer, president of the club, are Francis P. Garvan, president of the Chemical Foundation; former Ambassador James W. Gerard, Samuel Crowther, the widely known writer on economics, and Taylor Strawn, vice-president of the Elgin National Watch Company.

It is proposed to educate the public as to the menace to our recovery which lurks in our steadily mounting imports and dwindling export trade—a disastrous tendency for which Secretary Hull's trade policies have been in no small measure responsible.

Attention is justly called to the fact that not only do industry and the workers in industry suffer from this influx of foreign goods, but the farmers, dairymen and cattle breeders are equally affected by the shrinkage in farm exports while our imports of food show such an abnormal and disconcerting increase.

With exports of American merchandise showing a decrease of $579,000 during the first eight months of this year, while our imports of foreign merchandise for the same period showed an increase of $212,000,000, it is evident something must be done and without delay.

Such a disparity between exports and imports cannot but have a disastrous effect upon our efforts at recovery.

Whole State Must Help

Statewide support should be given Governor Curley's plans for the most intensive highway safety campaign in the history of the Commonwealth.

Although Registrar Frank A. Goodwin's report showing a reduction of 133 deaths and 4731 injuries in the automobile accident toll this year is gratifying, there remains much to be done.

Seven hundred and eighty-eight persons were killed on Massachusetts highways during the past year. More than 48,300 were injured. Hundreds were crippled for life.

These figures speak for themselves. The situation cannot be permitted to continue.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Remember the big gashes you used to get on your knees when you were a little tad, playing "tag" and "prisoner's base" on the gravelly school yard? And the gorgeous resultant scab? With what thrills you explored that excrescence, comparing it with inferior specimens! Or, if it happened to be on a more secluded portion of your anatomy, offering to "give a look" for the swap of an apple or gum. Happy days, when a scab could secure the coveted spotlight!

Elsie Robinson

"Jimmy Wallace!" mother used to shriek, "stop picking that place, this minute! You heard me!"

But you didn't stop picking that scab, did you? And some of us, I suspect, never will. These doleful creatures who spend hours detailing their spiritual rashings . . . telling us what failures they are . . . envying that they're so disgusted with their own cussedness that they're "just about ready to end it all." The fellow with the Perfectly Awful Temper . . . the girl with that Frightful Streak of Jealousy that's always getting her into jams.

CONDEMN THEMSELVES

But, I wonder—

Here, for example, are some extracts from such a writer. Actual quotes, which you've probably heard duplicated many a time in your own experience.

"Were you ever cowardly, sneaky and ashamed—jittery all the time? If you were and have come out of it, surely you can help me. But how typical it is of me to ask it! I am always pushing myself in—trying to find help, without thankfulness or humility.

"I know my trouble—supreme selfishness. I haven't any friends, because I try to use them all the time. I'm such a weakling that I am only friendly with people to whom I can be condescending or who may be of use to me . . . I'm lazy and shiftless besides . . . I have an exalted idea of my own importance until my pretence is discovered—then I am just a shrivelling, cringing fool.

"I haven't the courage to make a decision and stick to it. I run around, trying to find out what everyone else thinks before I make up my mind. I guess I'm still at the 'teething age', mentally. I love praise and blossom under it like a child. Don't tell me to pray—I've tried, but it's no use!"

And so on, and on, and on. Eight long pages of confession, lamentation, despair and reproach. And does she mean it? Is she really sorry—honestly seeking help? I doubt it.

Anyone intelligent enough to make such an analysis of her failings is smart enough to cure them. Moreover, as a trained nurse she has plenty of opportunity to get busy and snap out of them.

But here's betting dollars to doughnuts that she doesn't want to, and is just PICKING A SCAB.

EGOTISM TO BLAME

Human egotism is an amazing contrivance. It MUST find its place in the sun—and if it can't find it by fair means, it will do so by foul.

Even our prayers are so often exhibitionism. The nerve of us—nagging God to do petty chores we could manage in a jiffy for ourselves, if we had the spunk of a sand flea. But Heaven's the only audience we have left, after exhausting our long suffering friends and kin.

What idiots we are! If we'd spend one-tenth the time trying for real achievement that we waste in boasting or blubbering about imaginary weaknesses or woes, what wows we'd be!

DISHONORED!

The Failure to Redeem

Since March 31, 1933—the month in which the Democratic Party assumed power—the civil payrolls of the Federal Government have been increased $300,000,000 a year.

The number of civil employes has increased nearly FIFTY PER CENT—from 566,986 on March 31, 1933, to 794,467 on September 30, 1935.

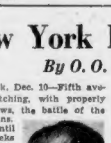
There are now 622,802 persons employed in the "regular agencies," 59,406 in "new agencies" created since the Democratic Party went into office besides relief agencies, and 112,259 employed in the agencies administering relief.

Instead of BUREAUCRACY BEING REDUCED, the President now has ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY SEPARATE AGENCIES OF THE GOVERNMENT reporting directly to him.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre



O. O. McIntyre

New York, Dec. 10—Fifth avenue is watching, with properly arched brows, the battle of the five and tens.

What was until a few weeks ago the biggest establishment now has a cater-corner rival, a fine architecturally ponderous as Tiffany's to the southward.

The new spire rears majestically on the site of the avenue's most celebrated splotch of shabbiness, the Wendell residence with its flapping shutters.

It was the gloomy house where the eccentric and recluse sisters provided the million dollar playground for a toothless dog.

The grandest of the five and tens is a miracle of direct lighting and the sidewalk windows running from two sides provide space for the town's biggest display of the window dresser's art. The sales girls will have been selections for a Ziegfeld ensemble.

Sightseeing wagons are now pointing it out along with the public library, the Empire State building and famed departmental ateliers. And it has already gained place in the postcard series for tourists. Selfridge, the London merchant prince, saw it and gasped.

The late Ben Throop, rich husband of Peggy Hopkins Joyce, Ruby De Remer, was owner of a most unusual trained dog. It was of the Belgian police species and veteran of the great war.

The dog met guests at the Throop home with friendly wagging, but trying to leave was something else. No one could depart without being escorted to the door by a member of the family or a servant.

The prize trick was uncanny. The dog would be brought in after women guests had deposited a slipper each in center of the floor. Without slightest hesitation the animal would carry the right slipper and drop it beside the proper foot.

Dear Aylesworth, the radio chieftain, probably faces more executive duties than any official in town. Aside from multifarious radio chores, he has a guiding hand on movie and vaudeville enterprises, sees scores daily and makes hundreds of rapid fire decisions, yet no one has seen him ruffled.

This glacial quality is especially stressed at board meetings, where often he makes but a single comment, but it is a word with the bark on it. He has a deaf ear for the internecine bickerings that afflict high powered outfits. He listens but decides for himself.

A Pittsburgh music lover, dropping in today, recalled the inside of Victor Herbert's resignation as conductor of the Pittsburgh symphony orchestra. He was drinking beer, after an enervating rehearsal, with his musicians in the Schenley Hotel when he was approached by one of the nabobs backing the orchestra.

The nabob hinted that fraternizing with ordinary musicians was not in keeping with the social position the job entailed. Herbert's Irishry came to a quick boil. "I'd rather be even with them than you!" he shouted, and resigned on the spot.

He came back to New York and worked on the compositions that won him immortality.

H. T. Webster and several others are wondering if Somerset Maugham was on the level in announcing he was in this country to spend money and not to make it. Their bewilderment followed several rubbers of bridge with him.

Incidentally Maugham revealed he had not visited the South Sea Islands for 20 years but there is a hotel at Pago Pago called "The Sadie" with a room the management points out as having been occupied by Maugham when there. It is one of the sights of the town.

Clare Boothe Brokaw's pathological stage morbidity revealed several weeks ago continues to puzzle Cholly Knickerbocker's sagacious. Her play was supposed to be an inside peep into the lives of her husband's family. It was a rousing skeleton rattling but the skeletons of what family no one knows save Miss Brokaw. Anyway it whooped up interest in a play at what most critics politely yawned.

This moment I received a telegram to attend a cocktail party for a magician at a big hotel. The magician failed to, of course, that I'll quaff a few libations and write a piece about him. This low opinion of newspaper ethics has ballooned to enormous proportions.

This is one of many such invitations daily. Every new night club, some backed by gangster loot, dangles the same half-free ringside table in exchange for a puff. One might ask: Why go into a dither about it? Well, for one reason it provides a paragraph that fills out the column.

Why Can't We Behave?

By Winifred Black

So divorces are on the increase at a rate of 2000 per cent in the last few years in this country, have they, Rabbi Goldstein, of the central conference of American rabbis? Not much of a surprise to many of us, but it's interesting nevertheless.

And you and the other rabbis are trying to devise some scheme of decreasing the divorce records. I wonder how you expect to do it. It will be interesting to see just how much success will crown your laudable efforts.

As a matter of fact, nobody can do a thing about the divorce records but the men and women who get the divorces and the boys and girls who marry with the the announced decision that they will stay married as long as it's comfortable, and then when they are tired of being married they will get divorces. Poor, foolish creatures! What do they expect of marriages anyhow?

HUSBAND A BORE?

It's a good thing you can't divorce your mother or your father or get a legal separation from your brothers and sisters forever.

So you're unhappy at home, are you, Mary? Your husband is a bit of a bore. He is crazy about gardening and you're crazy about the pictures. He likes to read and you want to play bridge and what are you going to do about it? Go fifty-fifty with him in the gardening and reading and expect him to go fifty-fifty with you in the pictures and the bridge.

TRY TO GO HALF WAY

And you, Tom, you and your son of "Over the Hills and Far Away." You're a fairly good fellow, Tom, but you know as well as I do that no decent woman would live with you for an hour if she knew what you really are. Why don't you try to be half-way decent and let it go at that?

Mary isn't perfect, neither are you, and neither will the next woman be. You'll get just as tired with her as you will with Mary. Why don't you just make up your mind to be friendly and comfortable and good-humored about it as any middle-aged man should have the sense to be?

Can't we Americans stop making a spectacle of ourselves in the eyes of the civilized world, and settle down and behave, not like spoiled children but like grown men and women with some sense of duty and responsibility just for a year or so?

'Dear Govt.'

By Winston Norman

Hon. Mr. Tugwell
MODLE TOWN DEPT.
U. S. Govt.

Dear Mr. Tugwell:

My brother-in-law Jake is a batchelor. It runs in his family, but all of a sudden he says he will get married if he finds a Lady who has the urge and $3 for a Lisence.

I asked Jake what he would do with a Wife at his age, & he says, "I need one so as to be a Married Man, and the Govt. will let me live in Utopia."

Jake told us what Utopia was, Mr. Tugwell, he says it was one of them Modle Towns about 5 mil. from here. "It is wonderful," says Jake. "Mr. Tugwell builds you a nice fresh house & a New Deal Nursy for your kids. There is Free School Books & also a meating-hall where you meat when you don't like the way the Govt. is treating you."

I begun to get more excited than Jake, and I says, "That is wonderful, what kind of work do you do in them Modle Towns?"

"Ah," says Jake, "that is the most Wonderful thing of all. You don't do no work. Mr. Tugwell builds a Govt Factory, but there isn't nothing for them to make," he says, "so all you do is lay in bed till 1 p. m. every day."

My wife Mabel is lissening in, Mr. Tugwell, and she begun to get mad. "My Heavens," she says, "why does the Govt pore money into a few folks in Modle Towns, when millions of other people can't send their Children to School on acct. they can't buy no books to learn out of?"

Jake tried to put Mabel's head at rest, Mr. Tugwell, by give her Statistics on what you was doing. "We will be in Utopia pretty quick," he says, "there is only 44 Million familys in the U. S., and Mr. Tugwell has put about 100 of them on Modle Towns in 3 years."

I set down on a piece of paper to work them figgers out, Mr. Tugwell. They showed where all the U. S. People would get into Utopia in about 240,000 years. But I and Mabel will not live that long, Mr. Tugwell, so can we move in right now with Jake and his Govt. wife?

Yours truly,
W. NORMAN.

Human Side of the News

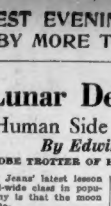
THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS



Edwin C. Hill

Sir James Jeans' latest lesson to his world-wide class in popular astronomy is that the moon is failing toward the earth and eventually will be destroyed. It will break up, he says, into two parts; then four, and finally into countless particles. When this happens, the world will have continuous moonlight from the reflection of the particles.

When Jeans speaks the layman understands. He feeds science to us by picture and example, just as the kindergarten teacher feeds knowledge to the infants.

We have imagined the sun to be the center of the system up above us. Sir James sets us right. It isn't the center—it is only a spot on the hub of the wheel.

"The whole system," he says, "is rotating around a center as a cartwheel around a hub. In this case, the hub is so far away that we cannot even see its brightest stars with the naked eye. We do not know the diameter of the wheel with an accuracy, but it is about 200,000 light years, and the sun is about half way out along one of its spokes.

"The turning wheel which the sun through space at the rate of 200 miles a second, yet the wheel is so vast is also that it takes the sun about 200,000,000 years to make one revolution around the hub.

"The sun would fly off the whirling wheel into space if the gravitational pull of stars did not restrain it."

LACK OF BALANCE

The Smithsonian Institution asked Sir James lately if he thought that science was a Frankenstein working for the destruction of the race by creating instruments of war and by its unbalancing devices which cause unemployment.

Sir James said no. He admitted that there had been a lack of balance in mechanizing industry and he said that the thing to do now was to discover labor-making industries.

"Just as remember," he said, "Faraday's electromagnetic induction, Maxwell's Hertzian waves and the Otto cycle—each of which has provided employment for millions of men. Let us remember that the economic welfare of the work of one scientists alone, Edison, has been estimated at 3000 million pounds.

"Is it not better to press on in our endeavor to secure more welfare and leisure and dignity of life for our own and future generations even though we risk a glorious failure, than to accept inglorious failure by perpetuating our present conditions? Shall we not risk the fate of the over-ambitious scientist, Icarus, than resign ourselves without an effort to the fate that has befallen the ants and the bees?"

OFFERS WAR REMEDY

As to war, science, he found, was pulling up the roots by "enabling our larger populations to live in comfort on the same limited area of land. Then we may hope to restrain the pressure of population and the urge for expansion, which, to my mind, are far more likely to drive the people of a nation to war than the knowledge that they—and also the enemies they will have to fight—are armed with the deadliest weapons that science can devise."

Science must go on and on, no one can control the direction.

"If all science were throttled down, the community would become crystallized in its present state, with nothing to do but watch the population increase and shiver as it waited for the famine, pestilence or war which must inevitably come to restore the balance between food and mouths, land and population."

In appearance, Jeans is all-British, down to the briar pipe which never seems to be out of his mouth save during his appearance on the lecture platform. There is something of Chesterton's boyishness about him, also the same absence of ostentation. His parents were Scotch, although he, himself, was born in Lancashire 58 years ago.

QUOTES WALT WHITMAN

S. J. Woolf, the illustrator and writer, interviewed Jeans on his last visit to America. They got around to the Jeans theory that the Great Architect of the universe is or was a pure mathematician, a controlling power without emotion, morality or esthetic appreciation. Woolf asked him how such a conception affected his feelings concerning the universe. Jeans smiled and quoted Walt Whitman:

"When I heard the learn'd astronomer;

"When the proofs, the figures were ranged in columns before me;

"When I was shown the charts and the diagrams, to add, divide and measure them;

"When I, sitting, heard the astronomer, where he lectured with much applause in the lecture room;

Raw Dealers Afraid

By James T. Williams, Jr.

If the Republicans select Cleveland for their national convention city next year and the Democrats Atlantic City or Philadelphia, current prognostications in political circles will be fulfilled.

Pursuant to long custom, the Republican National Committee will meet in the Federal City the second week in December to fix the time and place of the next Republican National Convention.

Although the call for the Democratic National Committee meeting has not yet been issued, the expectation is that its members will assemble in January to designate the time and select the place for the re-nomination of Mr. Roosevelt.

AN OLD THEORY

There was an old theory, logical enough it would appear, that the party in power should hold its convention first and thus oppposition party assemble in convention a week or so later. This is what the Republicans generally did while they were in power. When the Democrats entered power, however, they were unwilling to take the initiative.

There are several reasons this year why the Administration prefers to have the Republicans draft their platform and nominate their standard bearer first. One reason is the embarrassment the Democrats face in the contrast presented between the Democratic platform of 1932 and the record of the Democratic party in power. Should the Democrats meet first they would find it more difficult to ignore in their platform the promises they made to the country in 1932 and have failed to keep.

By forcing the Republicans to meet first the Democrats hope to be able to adopt a platform that will be divided between condemnation of the Republican platform of 1936 and the commendation of the Administration's record in power.

POLITICAL RALLIES

If the Republicans call their convention to meet the middle of next June the Democrats expect to fix the date for their convention a week or two later.

Because the Democratic Convention will be little more than a ratification meeting of all that the Administration has done and left undone, popular interest attaching to this gathering is naturally not as great as that which the time and place and result of the Republican National Convention are quickening the country over.

Any one of a half dozen large cities would gladly subscribe a liberal amount to pay the usual expenses which the convention city of either one of the two national parties is expected to meet. But the long lead which Cleveland seems to have over other available meeting places has little to do with money and a great deal to do with the Common Cause.

THE MAIN REASON

The real money matter involved concerns the distance the delegates would have to travel. As things will be, the usual office-holders among the delegates to the Republican National Convention, the party is naturally in favor of a city in the Middle West instead of one on the Atlantic or Pacific coast.

Then, too, Calvin Coolidge was nominated for the Presidency by the Republicans at their national convention which met in Cleveland in 1924. And in the ensuing election Mr. Coolidge was triumphant by an overwhelming majority.

Unless present indications fail, there will be more Federal officeholders among the delegates to the 1936 Democratic National Convention than have ever nominated a candidate for the Presidency since Republican Federal officeholders re-nominated President Benjamin Harrison at Minneapolis in June of 1892, only to go down to defeat by the Democrats under Grover Cleveland in the following November.

This Bridge Speaks for Mussolini

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Does Mussolini intend to keep the territory he has seized from Ethiopia?

Built by Italians for Italians, this is but one of the massive monuments that mark the Roman legions' march through the kingdom over which Emperor Haile Selassie holds dubious sway.

Note the steel, concrete and giant timbers of the bridge. They answer the question about Il Duce's permanent intentions.

Isn't It So?

There is no war between cities; none between states, then why between nations?

"God requireth that which is past."—Ecclesiastes 3:15.
